ANOTHER BANK CLOSED

EFFORT TO FREE PONZI ON BAIL; AUDITOR HUNTS HIDDEN CASH

Crowds of angry noteholders of Ponzi and the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company stormed the doors of Attorney-General Allen's office today calling for vengeance on Ponzi and Charles M. Brightwell, head of the defunct Ponzi rival firm. "Kill Brightwell," they shouted. "Let's have Brightwell," they demanded. The sergeant-at-arms called State police and State House guards who after great difficulty quieted the irate investors.

Important developments today in the case of Charles Ponzi were as follows:

1—The Polish Industrial Association, a bank at No. 37 Cross street, said to have been controlled by officials of the Hanover Trust Company, was closed by order of Bank Commissioner Allen. He said it had practically no cash left.

2—Federal Auditor Pride promised to reveal the hidden profits of Ponzi, much of which was said to be in his wife's name, and hold it for the benefit of creditors.

3—Clash between Federal and State officials over the custody of Ponzi, now in East Cambridge jail in default of $25,000 bail, as a government prisoner.

4—Assistant Attorney-General Hurwitz and Attorney McIsaac of counsel for Ponzi haggle over amount of bail to be set by civil authorities if Ponzi should be released on bail by the government. No agreement was reached as Hurwitz demanded $100,000 and McIsaac wanted only $50,000.

5—Three intervening petitions in bankruptcy filed against Ponzi in connection with the original petition brought against him.

The Polish Industrial Association, which did a business in loans, was closed by the bank commissioner, who announced: "Under the authority vested in me by law, I hereby take possession of the property and business of the Polish Industrial Association. The affairs of the Polish Industrial Association are very closely interwoven with those of the Hanover Trust Company, many of the laws are bad or of doubtful value. Furthermore, the bank has practically no cash left."

Police in Many New England Cities Close Offices of Old Colony Company

Two more arrests and a general closing of branch offices were today's principal developments in the belated drive on the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company and its 100 per cent. swindle.

The new arrests were made in Providence, where James R. King, local manager, and Arthur W. Thompson, assistant manager, were taken into custody.

Offices in Lynn, Taunton, Haverhill, Springfield, Providence and other cities were hurriedly closed today by order of the authorities, after hundreds of thousands of dollars had been sunk by credulous investors.

Coincident with these developments, local creditors of Ponzi's rivals filed involuntary petition in bankruptcy against the Old Colony, in an effort to conserve such of the get-rich-quick company's assets as may be left.

The attorneys filing the petition were John E. Crowley, Andrew A. Caranna and Vincent Brogna, who comprise Attorney-General Allen's

PONZI CREDITORS PROTECTIVE COMMITTEE.

15 Federal St., Room 502A, Boston.

PONZI NOTEHOLDERS have organized a committee under the name of the PONZI CREDITORS PROTECTIVE COMMITTEE for the purpose of safeguarding the interests of all the PONZI NOTE HOLDERS.

The Committee employs Hemphill & Wasserman, Esquires, as its counsel, and legal steps have already been taken in behalf of the PONZI ASSETS for the benefit of all creditors.

To obtain the best results it is advisable that the noteholders should work together. The Committee therefore invites your co-operation.

Anyone holding a PONZI NOTE, or a note of the SECURITIES EXCHANGE COMPANY, should, as soon as possible, present it either in person, or by mail, at the office of this committee.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PEOPLE
FROM
SIMON SWIG, VICE-PRESIDENT
TREMONT TRUST COMPANY
35 COURT STREET, BOSTON
BRANCH 77 WARREN ST., ROXBURY

It is sad to see a good man fall. He deserves and gets sympathy. It is good to see a bad man fall. He neither deserves nor should he get sympathy.

I helped puncture the get-rich-quick bubble by being the first to call public attention to it. It is well for the people that that company had some money on deposit with us. It gave us the opportunity to learn that the claims of its promoter were untrue, and, when we did, we at once asked that the deposit be withdrawn, and made public announcement of the request.

The innocent always suffer by the wrongs of evil-doers. I grieve for them. They can ill afford to lose by the hypnotism of bubble blowers.

I am sorry that a bank is involved. It means added injury to innocent people. While we have no interest in that bank as stockholders, depositors or creditors, I hope that its affairs may soon be righted.

Human nature is peculiar. Some are attracted by one magnet, some by another.

Some are actuated by promises of something for nothing, made by someone they know nothing about, while others are attracted by the promises of little for something.

The one is hypnotized by the get-rich-quick scheme; and the other is hypnotized into believing that safety lies in very small return. Neither extremist is right.

The wise man is he who asks and gives no special favors. He is the man who demands and gives a square deal. He is the man who deals with people he knows something about, and not with people he knows nothing about.

The square deal in banking will drive out bubble blowers. When the people will get a fair return on their investments and savings, and will be paid interest on their savings from the day of deposit to the day of withdrawal, and will have savings guaranteed by the State, then they will be less attracted by get-rich-quick schemes.

It is because I am the foe of the wild-catter and the get-rick-quick Wallingfords, and because I believe in the square deal that I have in season and out, of season urged the banks to pay interest monthly, and to divide fairly with depositors their earned and collected income. It is for the same reason that I am now urging the payment of interest from the day of deposit to the day of withdrawal, and for the guarantee of savings deposits by the State.

A contented person leaves well enough alone. Contentment comes with a square deal. Every human experience has its lesson. The present experience carries its lesson to people and bankers. People should learn never to seek to get rich quick, nor to trust their money with unknowns. Bankers should learn to give the people a square deal.

This lesson, if learned by both, will drive the get-rich-quick schemers out of business forever.

France or England?
Foolish Assassins.
They Sleep in Glory.
First Class Brigand.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1920.

France helps General Wrangel and practically declares war against Russia because what Frenchmen want is the thirty billions of francs that the Czar owed to the French nation.

Lloyd George declines to have any part in France's movement against the Bolsheviki because England's workmen, who haven't invested their money in Russian bonds, say that if the British government tries to make them fight Russia they will fight the British government.

London Punch, which expresses the "intelligence" of middle class England, prints a picture of a little rabbit marked the "Allies," gazing into the eyes of a gigantic snake, which is labeled "Third International," meaning Bolshevism. The foolish little rabbit is saying, "Since I have no weapon I must fascinate him with my eyes." England knows that the league is a joke.

Does this nation want to go into the League of Nations on the side of France or on the side of England in this Russian matter? It cannot go with both, for they are not working together. Isn't it wiser to stay out, letting France do whatever her holders of Russian bonds demand and letting England do whatever her workmen demand, while we attend to our business?

Political assassins are worse than criminals—they are dangerously stupid. They prove it by attacking men that are needed. This applies to Greek officers who tried to kill Venizelos two days ago and, fortunately, failed. It applies to the sentimental Brutus and his friends that killed Caesar. If he had lived Roman power might have lasted longer and the triumph of northern barbarism might have been less complete.

It applies to Charlotte Corday, who murdered Marat. If he had lived he might have made a success of the French Revolution at once without the preliminary imperialism and massacres of Napoleon.

The same rule would probably apply (although thousands will shriek "No, no!") to the person that probably will arise to assassinate Lenin—two have attempted already—and thus throw Russia into absolute anarchy.

Lenin MIGHT, although it is doubtful, establish a permanent government. He could do it if other nations would allow the Russians to make money and thus forget, as is usual with moneymakers, their first ardor for reform and perfection.

General O'Ryan, back from France, says: "Let United States heroes sleep in French soil. Their graves are well cared for."

They are very well cared for, and that gives comfort to the living. But in a few years how little it all matters. Where are the graves of the men that died in the "seven years' war," or the "thirty years' war," or the "hundred years' war"? Where are the graves of the men killed at Crecy, or the battle of Hastings, or the battle of Waterloo?

Billions and billions of human beings, some heroes, some cowards, have gone into the ground. Their graves are unknown. Every grave that exists today will be lost and forgotten ten thousand years from now, and ten thousand years is a day in the world's history.

The only important question is what can be done in life to make our life worth while in future ages? What happens to the grave now is nothing.

They opened the grave of Charlemagne and found it empty; that doesn't diminish his glory.

They took out the coffin of Voltaire and scattered his ashes on waste ground when the Revolution apparently died. But he lives and works in the French republic today and all over the world where men are free, just as he lived in the Revolution that apparently failed temporarily.

American soldiers that rest in the soil of France did good work that will live. They helped to end autocracy as an established institution on earth. That is their glory, nothing else counts.

If you want to be a briband be a first class briband and you may make it pay. Mr. Villa retires, having defied everybody in Mexico, and the United States particularly. He has killed many Mexicans, killed many Americans, but he made a COMFORTABLE job of it.

Mexico gives him a big ranch, pays off his followers generously, gives him money, all that he wants, and an escort of fifty men. In a small way Villa has done what Napoleon did on a big scale. But in his small way Villa was the better bandit of the two. He lands on a comfortable ranch, not on St. Helena. There was a limit to his ambition, and limited ambition means safety.

PRIDE PROMISES TO REVEAL PONZI'S HIDDEN PROFITS

U. S. AND STATE OFFICIALS CLASH OVER HIS CUSTODY

Mr. Allen added that all the loans were generally bad, but the personal loans were the worst.

Henry Chmielinski, president of the Hanover Trust Company, is president of the Polish Industrial Association, and Anthony Lakocki, treasurer, while James E. O'Connell, an official of the Hanover Trust, is secretary.

According to its last report, the bank deposits amounted to $952,000 and its capital was $15,775.

HEARING ON TUESDAY.

A representative of Slater & Wite, attorneys in the first involuntary bankruptcy petition filed against Ponzi, today made arrangements whereby Judge Morton of the federal court will give a hearing next Tuesday relative to the appointment of a receiver.

In the meantime, three intervening petitions in bankruptcy were filed in connection with the first case; Samuel Wolson of No. 40 Court street, and A. Louis Attmeyer, No. 33 State street, in behalf of Abraham M. Nudel, $2,500, in a negotiable instrument; Attorney J. L. Wiseman of No. 15 Tremont street in behalf of Dr. Adolph Sandberg, Attorney George V. Cohan of the Carney Building in behalf of Franklin A. Wolf, $200 in money loaned.

AFTER "CONCEALED" FUNDS.

Auditor Pride announced today that the United States would seize Ponzi money "concealed" in the name of his wife or the names of his agents, and hold it for the benefit of creditors.

While Auditor Pride declines to state the exact amount of money Ponzi transferred to bank accounts of Mrs. Ponzi, he is reported to have stated that it was a large sum.

"I am going after what may be called Ponzi's concealed assets. We shall reach the large amount transferred to or deposited in the name of Mrs. Ponzi," said Mr. Pride. "It can be taken away from her and will be.

"I am inclined to believe that a great deal of money collected by Ponzi and his agents has been deposited in the names of others. I am prepared to say no more."

The result of a rigorous examination of Ponzi's affairs speak for themselves. This money does not belong to her. It was obtained under fraudulent purposes to be used for fraudulent purposes. It will be up for us to show that the amounts placed in her name came from the investments of Ponzi's creditors.

"I do not think she had anything before Ponzi started on his career of quick activities and I believe it will be easy to show that. I do not know what is the amount of Ponzi's deposits in the Hanover Trust Company, but I do know that the money in Mrs. Ponzi's name is not in there."

With charles Ponzi in East Cambridge jail as the result of a court battle opened today between State and Federal authorities which may develop into a real fight.

The stake in the battle is Ponzi's prison cell.

Attorney-General J. Weston Allen brought all the resources of the State to bear to maintain possession of the prisoner. District Attorney Gallagher blocked Allen's every move.

Ponzi's counsel, Daniel H. Coakley, did not obtain the necessary $25,000 bail for the client, who consequently remained in the custody of the federal authorities.

Attorney-General Allen battled for Ponzi armed with a blanket warrant in fifty-three counts, which would send Ponzi to jail for an indefinitely long term. Should Ponzi be convicted by federal authorities of using the mails in a scheme to defraud he could only be given the maximum sentence of five years.

BLOCKED ALLEN'S MOVE.

Here's the way District Attorney Gallagher and Ponzi's counsel blocked Attorney-General Allen's attempt to gain custody of Ponzi:

Ponzi was out on bail of $25,000 on the Hanover Trust and $10,000 on the State charge. Morris Rudnick, a real estate operator and business intimate of Coakley's, was bondsman.

The attorney-generals activities to get Ponzi came early in the morning in securing the blanket warrant. Immediately word was passed around the city that Ponzi would be arrested by his bondsman. Rudnick did surrender Ponzi to the custody of the United States marshal.

The usual method pursued by attorneys in such cases would have been to secure a new bondsman. But should that have done so the State or the attorney-general were ready to pounce upon Ponzi with the blanket warrant.

Though Ponzi surrendered as per instructions at the bondsmans office yesterday afternoon he has been almost a day in East Cambridge jail and no new bondsman has been secured.

Hence Gallagher has won the first skirmish and the Attorney-General stands in security hearing.

An interesting sidelight to the legal battle for Ponzi is the past connections of the attorneys concerned. Daniel H. Coakley, Ponzi's counsel, was District Attorney Pelletier's campaign manager when Mr. Pelletier ran for district attorney.

Associated with him is Daniel V. McIsaac, a former assistant district attorney in Mr. Pelletier's office, who formerly was also counsel for the suspended Hanover Trust Company.

United States District Attorney Gallagher, now prosecuting for the government, was formerly another assistant district attorney in Mr. Pelletier's office. All three attorneys are intimate friends.

Meanwhile, Attorney-General Allen is being assisted by former Attorney-General Albert F. Parker, by Police Commissioner Curtis' counsel and the man considered formerly has Mr. Allen's strongest backer for his present office.

United States District Attorney Gallagher's effort to have Auditor Pride examine the books of the Hanover Trust Company, of which he was a director, and through which his reputed notes were cashed, has been balked by State Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen.

As a result Gallagher is reported as stating that he will resort to the usual mode of legal procedure now and will issue a summons for the bank commissioner to appear before the federal Grand Jury, with the papers and books of the bank that are essential to the Federal prosecution of the charges against Ponzi.

Gallagher is anxious to determine just what assets Ponzi has in the bank. Pride was ready to begin the work but Allen's attitude stopped him.

With the formation of a creditors' association, with clear representatives to press their claims, the statement of Auditor Pride to the effect that Ponzi's first duty will be to liquidate debts of the depositors in the Hanover Trust Company, if there was a shortage he being a director as well as depositor, stirred Ponzi's victims.

TO ATTACH PONZI FUNDS.

"Ponzi's first responsibility is as a director of the bank, to his creditors," said Pride, "and he, as a director, there not being enough funds there to pay his depositors, will be personally attached."

Bank Commissioner Allen has assured depositors that they will probably get their money and the bulk of the fund will fall upon Wallace C. Ponzi has a certified check for $1,600,000 on deposit in the bank.

With Ponzi's liabilities continuing to hourly mount and estimated by officials as totalling $4,000,000, the rush of note holders to the office of Attorney-General Allen on Beacon hill grows in volume. Many notes are appearing of which no record is to be found in the state. Ponzi's books and they considerably swell the grand total of his peculations.

It is also charged that some investors proved able to beat Ponzi at his game of raising money. It is charged that Ponzi has paper which, if available, would be valuable. Officials state it was comparatively simple matter to raise one of Ponzi's notes from $100 to $1,000 or even higher. Ponzi says he never knew this had been done.

SPECIAL GRAND JURY LIKELY.

A special session of the Suffolk County grand jury may be called to handle with all possible dispatch the case of Ponzi.

Attorney General J. Weston Allen, District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier and other officials conferred with Governor Coolidge in the judges' lobby of the Superior Court. The object of the conference was not made public, but it was rumored that it was prompted by developments in connection with the get-rich-quick swindle.

ALLEGED LAWRENCE WHITE SLAVER JAILED

Lawrence, Aug. 14.—A six months' sentence was given Henry Tamelio, nineteen, charged with bringing Rosina Bertolo to Lawrence from Providence. He appealed and was held in bonds of $2,000. Samuel Linden, aged twenty-one, of Chelsea, a prize fighter, was arraigned on the same charge. Linden was said to have been in charge of a Piedmont Valley camp. The arrest of another man is expected as developments grow in connection with the case. Michael Gaglano, a Boston taxi driver, summoned as a witness, defied Linden denied taking money from the girl. His case will be heard August 21.

WORCESTER RESENTS WILD LIQUOR RAIDS

Worcester, Aug. 14.—Wholesale searching of houses and holding up of automobiles on highways surrounding Worcester is causing considerable criticism in Worcester. Several Worcester attorneys state that searches have been made without warrants and merely through bluff on the part of the agents.

Federal agents made two more arrests in their campaign for enforcing the Volstead Act. Walter Nalewalski of No. 67 Lafayette street, a grocer, and Mrs. Edward Yanover of No. 8 Scott street.

FIND GIRL'S SKELETON IN BARN; SAY MURDER

Onawa, Ia., Aug. 14.—The skeleton of a girl probably sixteen or eighteen years of age, has been found here in a barn loft. Indications are she was lured to the loft and murdered.

The victim's body was covered with quicklime and rested on a floor of rotten boards. She died in the late summer, September 7, 1917. Police records are being scanned to ascertain if they contain the report of a girl disappearing about that date.

TWO MARINE OFFICERS DIE IN PLANE ACCIDENT

Washington, Aug. 14.—Captain Thomas G. Edwards of Baker City, Ore., and lieutenant James G. Bowen of Baltimore, Md., both attached to the United States Marine corps, were killed in an airplane accident at Quantico, Va., today, according to advices reached here.

Ponzi's Friends Also Juggled Dollars

To what extent grafters and close friends of Ponzi made profits in the get-rich-quick fraud is yet to be determined. One of the ways to pick up some easy money was:

A man would give Ponzi his note for $1,000. Ponzi would endorse it, and the man would discount it at a bank. He would turn over the cash to Ponzi, who would issue to him a Ponzi note for $1,500, which would mature in forty-five days. At the end of that time Ponzi would cash his own note, the "investor" would keep $500 and then cover his original note at the bank with the other $1,000.

Ponzi admitted that some of these notes were as high as $20,000, and as they came due he was prepared to pay $10,000 interest.

Recommends Divorce for Pauline Frederick

PAULINE FREDERICK

New York, Aug. 14—Recommending divorce for Pauline Frederick screen actress, from her husband, Willard Mack, a referee's report has been filed in the county clerk's office here. The "unknown woman" was named by the actress at the time she brought suit last November. All testimony was taken in private.

The couple were married in 1917. A short time after Marjorie Rambeau had obtained a divorce from Mack, Miss Frederick was named co-respondent in that suit. She was Mack's third wife and is a former Boston girl.

EXPRESS RATES LEGION EXPELS UP 12.5 P.C. 2 MEMBERS

Authority Granted by Commission Will Mean $35,800,000 Additional Income

Washington, Aug. 14.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has authorized an increase of 12.5 per cent. on present express rates. The increase in charges resulting from the order is estimated at $35,800,000.

The commission decreed that the proposed increased class and commodity express rates" requested by the express companies, amounting to 27.16 per cent., were not justified. The increase of 12.5 per cent. does not apply to milk and cream traffic, which are increased to equalize increases granted railroads on these commodities.

"No adequate ground was disclosed to support the request of shippers for exemption of certain commodities from application of increased rates," the commission ruled. "A prescription of terminal to terminal rates to apply in the absence of pick up and delivery service of deductions from the published rates where either service is not rendered," was not deemed necessary.

The increased wage award rendered to express employes was not provided for in the commission increase.

The rates will go into effect one day after tariffs are filed with the commission. These tariffs must be filed at the end of a ninety-day period.

The commission found no warrant for requiring the establishment of carload commodity rates on rubber tires or any fabric lower than the rates than carload or quantity rates, to apply where shippers load or unload.

PROMISES TO RAISE RENTS WITHIN LAW IN MALDEN

Louis Kaufman of Salem street, Malden, a landlord who appeared before the State Commission on the Necessaries of Life to answer to complaints of tenants against alleged excessive rent increases, assured the commission that he would keep within the 25 per cent. law and would serve no eviction notices on his tenants.

Prizes for Playoff

Templeton, Aug. 14.—For the playoff of the Gardner Veteran Firemen's association and the Gardner Post, American Legion, here, on Saturday, August 28, $700 in prizes have been offered. Returns indicate that every engine belonging to the Wachusetts Valley Hand Engine League will compete.

Two Lancaster Girls Leave Town; Warrants for Arrests Issued

Lancaster, Aug. 14.—Two girls have left town, two American legion members have been expelled and one policeman has resigned as a result of a scandal which is the talk of the town.

Chief of Police Ramsdon today obtained warrants for the arrest of one of the men and both girls, charging improper conduct and drunkenness.

The man is Edward Safford, an overseas veteran.

The girls are Helen Whelan, assistant postmaster at South Lancaster, and May Costello.

It is charged they were found by a legion post official in the legion rooms in Safford's home. They left the building before the police arrived.

Traffic Officer Ray Fay, on duty near the legion headquarters, has offered his resignation to the selectmen and it has been accepted. His connection with the case is not made clear in the statement he issued in making the post.

The legion post last night expelled Safford and another member. The name of the second member was not divulged.

PARIS BANS STATUE PASSED IN NEW YORK

Paris, Aug. 14.—There was a near riot in the art exposition of the "Independents" when Sculptor Brancusi arrived and discovered that his bronze bust of the "Princess X" had been removed by the authorities on the ground that it was indecent.

But, I showed it in New York and the public was delighted," expostulated Brancusi.

He produced some press clippings to prove his assertions and the "Princess X" went back to her pedestal.

Ricker Acting Chairman

Augusta, Me., Aug. 14—Hiram W. Ricker, of South Poland, has been chosen acting chairman of the Hayden and Coolidge Club of Maine, the same Milliken is the honorary president.

Lightning Kills Aged Woman; Hit Twice

Keene, N. H., Aug. 14.—Mrs. Ella Stevens, an elderly woman residing in Swanzey Center, about three miles from this city, was killed by lightning last night. The woman was washing dishes during the electric storm, the most severe for years in this section of the State.

The lightning ripped off a stove and stocking and burned the woman's body.

Mrs. Stone was struck by lightning in the same house a few years ago, but was not seriously injured.

PONZI'S RIVALS ARE JAILED

Foreign Exchange Officials Under Heavy Bail; Firm's Branches Are Closed

special committee to handle the remains of Chi Ponzi fortune.

THREE CREDITORS ACT.

They represented Karen Larsen of No. 123 Central avenue, Medford; Mary Lujts of No. 113 Central avenue, Medford, and E. Petersen of No. 20 Vermont avenue, Somerville, as creditors.

In bringing the petition, the creditors followed the procedure of the creditors of Charles Ponzi, model of the Old Colony founders.

Frank Zorn of No. 1 Mascot street, Dorchester, sub-agent for the Old Colony Company, and fourth man to be arrested yesterday, was arraigned in Municipal Court today, charged with larceny. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $2,000 for a hearing August 24.

Zorn's counsel pleaded for lower bail on the ground that his client was not even an agent of the Old Colony, but merely an agent hired by an agent.

Jerry Creed insisted on the bail, and also insisted that Zorn be given a hearing along with President Charles M. Brightwell, Charles Fred Myers and Raymond Myers, principals of the company. The hearing tonight or Friday fail having failed to get the $50,000 bail demanded.

Police authorities charge Agent King and Assistant Agent Thompson with conspiracy and larceny. Bail was fixed in $4,000, Thomsonn in $2,000.

Federal officials stepped into the investigation today when it was alleged that one of the agents of the wounds represented himself as a United States agent and attempted to pacify the infuriated note holders by informing them that the office had been closed by order of the district attorney and that they could return in four days and get their money in full.

State officials say that the organizers of the company were prepared to close down with thousands of dollars. Charles M. Brightwell, president of the concern, was found in his office by police, are mob of disappointed clients and it is claimed that the false announcement was made to pacify the note-holders and allow the head of the firm to get away.

PLEA NOT GUILTY.

The sudden closing of the offices at No. 34 Devonshire street and No. 32 Oliver street by Attorney-General Allen occurred while Ponzi was being arraigned by his bondsman, Morris Rudnick, real estate agent, of No. 118 Homestead avenue, Roxbury.

Brightwell and the Myers brothers were arraigned before Judge Bennett in Central Police Court charged with the larceny of $500 from an unidentified client. All pleaded not guilty and were held for a hearing on August 24.

CLAIM SOLVENCY.

At the awaiting arraignment and after the proceedings, which were over in a few minutes, the three officials of the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company protested that they were conducting an honest business and could meet all obligations. They told this to Inspectors Finn and Hurwitz, who arrested them.

David F. Cummings, 22 years old, of No. 15 Leyland street, Dorchester, was taken in police headquarters with the Myers brothers and detained as a suspicious character. He is said to have been an active agent for Ponzi before joining the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company. It is said that many of Ponzi's employes were taken over by the Brightwell concern. It was further alleged that they and the Ponzi interests may be run affiliated in some way, but there was nothing official to confirm this theory.

JUDGE REFUSES DELAY.

Application was made on the fact that former Assistant District-Attorney Daniel V. McIsaac, one of Ponzi's counsel, had resigned from the office of counsel officials of the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company. With him is the law firm of Lawdon & Wyman. Attorney Lawdon asked that the proceedings be delayed until he located Attorney McIsaac, but Assistant Attorney-General Hurwitz informed the court that counsel for the accused had known what was to happen. Judge Bennett directed the defendants to be arraigned.

HEAVY BAIL URGED.

In demanding heavy bail, Attorney Hurwitz said:

"While the amounts mentioned in the complaints are small the scope of the alleged transactions is large and involves several hundred thousands of dollars. On that account we ask to have substantial bail imposed because we have evidence that the accused were just about to leave the State when taken into custody today."

"This is a very serious affair," remarked Judge Bennett, who promptly accepted Hurwitzs suggestion to place bonds of $10,000 each on defendant. Assistant to the Attorney General Samuel Spring appeared with Hurwitz for the prosecution.

MRS. BRIGHTWELL AFFECTED.

A fashionably attired young woman, who was said to be the wife of Brightwell, hurried to police headquarters to see him and nearly swooned after having a glimpse in the court room. Brightwell and the Meyers brothers declared that they could get bail. They were taken to the jail in a touring car.

The Meyers brothers and Cummings were taken into custody at Young's Hotel and Brightwell was later placed under arrest. While they were being subjected to the Bertillon system, Inspectors Burke and Laughlin, accompanied by Hurwitz drove in an automobile to the company's offices and seized all the books and documents which were taken to police headquarters as evidence.

CRASH FOLLOWS EXPOSE.

The crash came when agents read the Boston American's expose and realized that they had been tricked into getting thousands of dollars from their credulous friends.

Every one of these agents who has been interviewed declares that he was told to offer 50 per cent. interest in forty-five days although the notes on their face showed a promised return of 100 per cent in six months.

A free clause, similar to the one used by Ponzi, read that the company might in ninety days refund the note at 50 per cent. interest. When the company realized it was under investigation it ceased to have posted in its offices several notices cautioning the agents to tell only the truth.

The introduction of one of these agents to an assistant district attorney by a Boston American reporter and the subsequent stories of a number of colonists was followed in less than two hours by the arrest of the leader.

INSTRUCTIONS TO AGENTS.

The proof that agents were instructed to tell false stories in getting subscriptions is seen in the following statement made in the presence of the Boston American reporter:

Q—What is your name? A—Italian.

Q—What do you do for the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company? A—I am a sub-agent for them.

Q—Who is the man you work for? A—Mr.

Q—Where does he live? A—I don't know.

Q—Where is the place of business? A—No. 34 Devonshire street.

Q—When did you see him last? A—I have not seen him for four days. I must him. I met different people every time I went there. I used to go to No. 34 Devonshire street, too.

Q—When is the first time you met Mr. ——? A—About a week ago.

Q—What talk did you and ——— have? A—He told me I was going to invest money in Europe. Importing and exporting. Said they would give me a receipt and 50 per cent in 45 days. He said that they had a million and a half dollars' worth of stock and they wanted people to invest their money.

Q—Who was present besides you and Mr. ——— talk with him? A—We were talking in private office. There were others. There were two other men and a girl present. The girl was a typist. I don't know what their names were, but one of the men was an agent.

Q—How long were you there? A—Three quarters of an hour.

Q—Have you told all this talk there is to your friends? A—They were talkin gwith others, too.

Q—How did you get you to do? A—Go among my friends and get them to invest money for 45 per cent in 45 days.

HE GOT A PER CENT.

Q—What did they agree to pay you? A—At first I got 5 per cent of all money I received and now I am getting 7 per cent.

Q—How do you tell people you were trying to sell to? A—I brought them to the office and Mr. Meyer talked with them, telling them that they had a million and a half dollars' worth of stock and that they could get back five or six dollars. I got 7 per cent of money invested by my customers.

Q—What did you think a million and a half dollars' worth of stock meant? What did you think stock meant? A—I thought it meant cash money or property. I brought my friends to the office on Devonshire street from my own friends that they were buying, importing and exporting.

Q—How much money have you got for the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company since you went to work for them? From your friends? A—Over four or five thousand dollars.

Q—Have you ever talked with the president or the company? A—No. I don't know him. One of my customers who invested fifteen hundred dollars has been to their office inquiring for their money.

ISSUE 2 MORE WARRANTS.

Two other warrants were issued in connection with the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company.

During the wild scenes enacted by the frenzied investors in the company before its suspension, Brightwell paid out $50,000 in cash and finally announced that the district attorney had ordered payments stopped. Later he said that this was a mistake.

Aim to Put Courtship on Higher Level

By International News Service.

London, Aug. 14.—Courtship is told too lightly—at least in England—and the clergy should do something about it. Thirty-six bishops in conference at Lambeth declared courtship should be lifted to a higher level.

Betrothal should be presented to the young as a serious matter," the bishops said. "It is incumbent upon the clergy to visit the betrothed and impress upon them the responsibilities of marriage and the sacredness of the union.

"We therefore urge upon the clergymen a systematic study of moral theology."

Banker Calls Ponzi Case 'a Pitiful Exhibition'

Editor American:

What a pitiful exhibition of official incompetence!

If it was right to stop Ponzi at all he should have been stopped absolutely and not be allowed to pay some at the expense of others—that is clear.

But why is such a self-evident fraud allowed at all?

Thousands are gamblers and gullible, but our goverment and officials are incompetent.

Must we have over and over again these swindles of the 520 per cent. Miller-Ladies' Deposit-Ponzi type, just paying to the early comers the funds of the later comers?

I am sending this to the newspapers, and a number of officials, not to find fault, for if I had been an official I might have been just as incompetent and lacking in courage, but with the thought of focusing the experience of the past and present in future preventative action.

Heavy Fighting Along the Danzig Corridor

By International News Service.

Berlin, Aug. 14.—Heavy fighting between the Russians and the Poles left flank is in progress along the Warsaw-Danzig corridor, where the Reds are trying to break through to the Vistula River, according to advices from Marienwerder today. The Russians that captured Mlawa were reported to be attempting an advance in the direction of Dirschau.

No fighting was reported from the Siedlce sector, where the Polish armistice and peace envoys are scheduled to cross the lines on their way to Minsk this evening.

Bolshevist Rule to End in 6 Months, Says Francis

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 14.—There will be no world war against Soviet Russia, Ambassador Francis left the United States will not take up arms against the Russians unless forced to do so in self-defense, and there will not be forced. Instead the Russian people themselves will solve their own problems, probably within the next six months, by the overthrow of the Bolsheviists.

This prediction was made by Ambassador to Russia David R. Francis today following a conference with Secretary Tumulty and Secretary Colby. Ambassador Francis left Russia in March, 1918, but technically is still accredited.

Not more than 10 per cent of the people of Russia are Bolsheviists at heart," the ambassador stated. "That being the case, Bolshevist rule over Russia cannot last long. The American note on the Polish situation will help a lot. It will find its way into Russia, you may rest assured, through General Baron Wrangel in control of the southern part of the country around the Crimea, though Russians in other parts of Europe and in other ways.

"The note creates a general war between the allies and the Bolsheviists."

Diplomatists here are apparently at the same opinion as Ambassador Francis, that the note is the least intention of annihilating Poland. Russia, despite such guarantees against new attacks by the Polish army.

"We demand the reduction of the Polish army to 50,000 men, but at the same time Poland's own workers will be organized and the members of the Russian soviet will be armed to insure tranquility. The body of militia, composed of the Polish workmen, will serve as a counterpoise to the imperialistic Polish landlords.

"The Soviet government seeks the best guarantee in arming the Polish workers and trusting them to establish the regime given to the allied powers, according to declaration of Premier Millerand at Spa and Porte. They were quoted as saying:

"The treaty does not matter. It soon will be annulled by the Russian and the advance by the Russian army through Rumania and Armenia."

The Soviet government is moving its forces toward from the Polish front to the Crimean front to reinforce the army counter-attacking General Wrangel's anti-Bolshevik army, according to information received at British headquarters from Constantinople today.

The Reds are launching violent assaults over a wide front near the Dniepr river.

Another Victory for Gen. Wrangel's Forces

By International News Service.

London, Aug. 14—General Wrangel's anti-Bolshevik army again defeated the Reds on the Crimean front, capturing 400 prisoners, according to official dispatch from Constantinople today.

General Wrangel's fleet is bombarding the Red positions at Tchkekoff.

TO CREATE 'RED' POLISH ARMY

Russia's Only Design Is to Hold Armed Workmen Against Rich Landlords

Copyright, 1920, International News Service.

Berlin, Aug. 14.—Russia does not intend to crush Poland, but she does plan to create a great army of Polish workmen, as a counterpoise to the Polish immobilized landlords and as a bulwark of peace," it was declared today by George Tchitcherin, Foreign Minister in the Russian government at Moscow and regarded as the diplomatic brains of the Soviet. His statements were made in a wireless interview.

M. Tchitcherin said the Soviet would claim absolute freedom of action in the Polish crisis if general peace treaty was concluded with Great Britain. He gave the first official denial to reports that the Red army was out of hand and that the generals on the Polish front were defying the orders of the civilian members of the Soviet.

WAR OR DISASTER PROTECTION.

In reply to numerous questions sent from Berlin to Moscow, M. Tchitcherin gave the following long reply:

"Soviet Russia does not the least intention of annihilating Poland. Russia desires only guarantees against new attacks by the Polish army.

"We demand the reduction of the Polish army to 50,000 men, but at the same time Poland's own workers will be organized and the members of the Russian soviet will be armed to insure tranquility. The body of militia, composed of the Polish workmen, will serve as a counterpoise to the imperialistic Polish landlords.

"The Soviet government seeks the best guarantee in arming the Polish workers and trusting them to establish the regime given to the allied powers, according to declaration of Premier Millerand at Spa and Porte. They were quoted as saying:

"The treaty does not matter. It soon will be annulled by the Russian and the advance by the Russian army through Rumania and Armenia."

ARM POLISH WORKERS.

"Russia stands ready to withdraw her army from Poland and the Polish frontier, where only 200,000 will be left.

"Instead of Russian occupation, the Soviet government relies entirely upon the arming of Polish workers and allowing them to maintain peace. Poland will retain sufficient arms and war materials to supply this army of workmen.

"Russia will insist that Poland send back to the families of the Polish citizens who were killed or wounded during the war, or had any connection with the war.

"These are he principal points from which you will see the new era beginning."

One of the questions wirelessed to Moscow referred specifically to the Soviet could not stop the advance of the Russian army on Warsaw, even if it wished. Tchitcherin then answered this query:

KAMENEFF HEADS ARMY.

"Your supposition about the Russian marching of the Soviet is truly absurd. Neither General Brussiloff, nor General Kuropatkin command the Russian army. They merely sit upon a military advisory board.

"The commander in chief of the Soviet army is General Kameneff. His chief of staff is General Lasarevitch. The commander on the western (Polish front) is General Tukhatchevsk, a very good young Communist officer.

"The supreme military control is in the hands of a revolutionary military committee at the front. The Red army is completely in the service of the Soviet government and is controlled by the Soviet government."

As to Great Britain, M. Tchitcherin said:

"Until a general agreement is reached with Great Britain, the Soviet government has an absolutely free hand in the Orient. Limitations can be decided upon only by a treaty of some other such agreement. I can give assurance that such limitations will be rigidly observed."

YOUNG MOTHER FORGES CHECKS TO RANSOM BABY HELD IN PAWN

STOLE TO PROVIDE FOOD

To Escape Punishment She Signed Paper Giving Child to Another Woman

Chicago, Aug. 14.—One of the most amazing stories of compelling mother love was revealed here when Mrs. Clara Walters admitted she had pawned her two-year-old daughter to get money to supply the needs of the child's life.

As she sat on her cot in jail she told of the heartbreaking struggle to obtain money for the baby's ransom, the desperate expedient of forged checks and—jail.

"I was living at the home of Mrs. Maude Goodhue," sobbed the pretty stenographer. "The baby needed clothes and food. I saw two diamonds in Mrs. Goodhue's ring and I took them.

"Then she told me she would keep the baby until I paid her $200 for the diamonds and gave me a paper to sign. I signed it.

"How else was I to get money to ransom my child?" she asked between tears and told how she forged checks at department stores.

"My mother sent for her," she wept. "I want her to have the baby, not the other woman. They are taking my Catherine away from me."

Mrs. Goodhue appears to be just as anxious to keep the child. She is prepared to wage a bitter legal battle for the adoption of the child. She will be opposed by Joseph Kroll, the child's grandfather.

Kroll said he had been paying $8 a week for the support of the child.

LOGAN AND BIGNEY IN WORDY DEBATE

Colonel Edward L. Logan and Representative Robert E. Bigney engaged in an altercation at a City Council hearing on the granting of a permit to the Tidewater Oil Sales Company to erect three storage tanks at 1' and East First streets, South Boston. Colonel Logan charged that conditions for political office in South Boston were throwing a scare into the section by "crying out fire hazard." Bigney charged Logan represented all the oil companies. The Judge stated that it was not his intention to invest money in a new home for the purpose of having it destroyed by fire. The council took the matter under advisement.

HOT WEATHER TO STAY AWHILE

Forecaster Sees Prospects of Improvement Monday; Friday Night Record Breaker

No relief from the hot and humid spell is promised by the weather man until Monday. Today he held out prospects of thunder showers this afternoon or this evening.

Sunday will be fair with moderate southwest winds.

Last night was the warmest night this year, according to the figures, the lowest temperature during the night being 74.

Today the humidity was 87, with the temperature at 8 o'clock 79. A year ago today the highest temperature was 83; the hottest August 14 on record was in 1918, when the thermometer reached 96.

Cloudy weather prevails in the eastern half of the country, where slight rainfalls are the rule. The temperatures continue high in all the Eastern States and moderately cool in the Western.

The lowest temperature in the country—it—was at North Platte, Neb. The lowest in New England was 56 at Eastport, Me. The highest in New England was 72, at Boston; highest in the country is 82 at Pensacola, Fla.

HAVERHILL LANDLORD MAY LOSE BUSINESS

Haverhill, Aug. 14—The Municipal Council will vote on the question of revoking the license of Demetrious George, grocer and confectioner, after a heated hearing in which representatives of every patriotic organization in the city protested against the man for his alleged action in ordering the family of Mrs. M. A. Rowe out of the corporation, because they failed to purchase bread of him.

It developed that four sons of Mrs. Rowe served in the World War, and the American Legion in the city threatened to take matters into their own hands.

TO DEPORT LORD MAYOR OF CORK

British Military Authorities Act Against Sinn Fein Leader

By International News Service.

London, Aug. 14.—Lord Mayor Macsweeny of Cork, who was arrested with ten others while attending a session of the Sinn Fein court in the Cork City Hall, has been ordered deported by the British military authorities, according to a dispatch from Cork today.

The charge that the British reign of occupation in Ireland is devastating the country was made today by Sir Henry Grattan-Bellew, who has just resigned his Irish posts as magistrate and lieutenant.

"British soldiers are wrecking Irish towns and ruining Irish industry and they are proceeding without camouflage," declared Sir Henry.

LYNN'S UNION LABOR PAPER IS SUSPENDED

The Union Leader, a weekly newspaper published by various unions in Lynn, organized by the Progressive Publishing Company only about a year and a half ago, has suspended publication. In a statement announcing the action, Arthur E. McGRAW CASE TO GO TO JURY

Action Follows Failure to Make Statement and Refusal to Receive Summons

By International News Service.

New York, Aug. 14.—Efforts to get a statement from John J. McGraw, manager of the Giants, regarding injuries suffered by John C. Slavin when he escorted McGraw home from the Lamb's Club after a brawl Sunday morning, having failed, a grand jury will be asked to investigate.

Witnesses will be summoned before the body next week, District Attorney Swann said today, and there will be no let-up until the case is closed.

When McGraw failed to appear at Swann's office and refused to admit a process server, a deputy district examiner and an assistant district attorney were sent to the McGraw home. They also were refused admittance. McGraw, according to his physician, is unable to receive visitors or anyone.

The police declare a milkman and another man have been found who say they saw a struggle in front of McGraw's house and that Slavin was pushed backward by McGraw. These men also will be called before the grand jury.

FOUR AUTOS DAMAGED ON NAHANT BEACH ROADWAY

Lynn, Aug. 14.—Four automobiles were damaged in accidents on the Nahant Beach roadway, but none of the passengers was injured. Carpin Goldberg of Lawton avenue, Lynn, ran into a machine owned and driven by Edward Deery of Franklin street, Salem. Goldberg was accompanied by his wife and five children and Deery was with a young woman. When one of the tires on Deery's machine blew out the car smashed into the car owned and operated by Morris Budd of Lawrence, smashing the front wheels of the latter machine. In the meantime Goldberg's automobile ran into a machine owned and driven by Miss Elizabeth Reed of Bassett street, Lynn, and her machine lost a fender. Goldberg was arrested by Metropolitan Park police.

His arrest followed an audit of the institution's books. He was held without bail for hearing Wednesday.

McGRAW CASE TO $50,000 LOSS IN RAYNHAM FIRE

Explosion Injures Two and Postmaster and Wife Are Found Unconscious

Raynham, Aug. 14.—With the assistance of the Taunton fire department, the local fire fighters checked a $50,000 fire here today after it had destroyed the Nelson Rivet Works and partially damaged the new Raynham Postoffice.

Two men were badly burned when the gasoline tank of an auto truck exploded and the postmaster and his wife were carried unconscious from their home over the postoffice.

The fire was discovered in the Rivet Works by two passersby who sounded the alarm.

Ralph Ianforth and Frederick Hall, volunteers, rushed into the postoffice to remove an automobile truck. While pushing it out there was an explosion and flaming gas completely enveloped them.

Their cries and the cries of the men sent other volunteers to their aid. Both were carried out, being severely injured. They were taken to the Morton Hospital in Taunton.

The flames communicated to the postoffice building adjoining. Volunteers rushed up through the building and found Postmaster Rogers and his wife unconscious. They were carried out and revived.

TRAIN HITS AUTO IN FOG, TWO MEN JUMP TO SAFETY

Lewiston, Me., Aug. 14.—Joseph P. Chabott and Joseph Bournier, both of Pettengill street, had a narrow escape from death when a Maine Central passenger train hit an automobile truck driven by Chabott. Both men jumped in the nick of time. Fog obscured the train. The truck was demolished.

An automobile driven by Nathan Benson struck a dog and turned over on the State road, near Monmouth, pinning the driver under the steering wheel. Farmers heard his shouts and released the pearler. Benson was unconscious when they arrived. He was seriously hurt.

PROFESSOR SUES FOR DIVORCE

Suit Threatens to Expose Faculty Set Revels at the University of Illinois

Champaign, Ill., Aug. 14.—Professor Cyrus E. Palmer, member of the faculty of the University of Illinois, stood through his attorneys that he is about to file a divorce suit charging that his beautiful young wife and Carl A. Carlson, business man, carried on a courtship in an ice box of a butchershop.

The announcement that this suit is to be filed is about to break the "wine, woman and song" scandal which has hung threateningly over the University of Illinois and Champaign social circles.

TO TELL OF "WILD" PARTIES.

The divorce suit, it is said, will tell of "wild" parties at the home of a professor, where other professors' wives and prominent business men and university students participated.

It was reported through Champaign today that Professor Leroy Wilson is coming up from Cincinnati to find the source of rumors that he was forced to resign from the faculty through a connection with the Palmer scandal. When he finds the source, it is hinted, he will do battle with whoever originated it.

Ralph Jones, instructor in athletics, has also announced, through his attorneys, that he will demand retractions of rumors that he resigned because of the Palmer affair.

MAD POLICE RAID HIS HOME.

So stirred is Champaign over reports growing out of the Palmer scandal, of "shimmy" parties and joy rides among the exclusive university set that it threatens to become a county political issue.

Professor Palmer left his wife in June, after he had the police raid his home. He told the officers two other men were there, but they failed to find any.

YEOGIRLS PROTEST BEING OUSTED WITHOUT NOTICE

Forty-two former yeogirls appeared at the State headquarters of the American Legion and protested against their discharge from the employ of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation on less than a 24-hour notice.

They declared that had they served but two and one-half hours more they would have completed a year's service with the government and would have automatically been entitled to thirty days' leave with pay. To this end they have forwarded their complaint to Senator Walsh and other officials at Washington.

WILSONS MAY OCCUPY McLEAN MANSION

Washington, Aug. 14.—It is quite possible that the President will make Washington his permanent home after March 4. It was learned today that Mr. and Mrs. Wilson will occupy the charming colonial mansion known as the Nourse Manse, north of Friendship, the late John R. McLean's show place. Nourse Manse was purchased several months ago by Admiral Cary Grayson, the President's personal physician, but was never occupied by him.

At the time of the purchase it was reported that Grayson was merely an agent for the President.

TWO ESCAPE FROM UPSET AUTO IN RIVER

Bellows Falls, Vt., Aug. 14.—Jed A. Vancor and Frank O. Davis of Saxtons River had a narrow escape from death here when their automobile plunged into a 15-foot embankment, landing upside down in Saxtons River. The car overturned on the old covered bridge at Gageville. The occupants of the car were uninjured, although both landed under the car in four feet of water. Vancor worked himself free and extricated Davis from under the car. The automobile was badly damaged.

Salisbury, Aug. 14.—Police are searching for thieves who stole $150 worth of equipment from motor boats owned by William Bailey, Edward F. Murphy, William Walsh and P. Bacon.

Wilson Makes Appeal for Suffrage

Washington, Aug. 14.—President Wilson urged that the Tennessee House follow the example of the Senate and pass the suffrage amendment. In a telegram to Speaker Seth Walker, the President said:

"May I not, in the interest of national harmony and vigor and of the establishment of the leadership of America in all liberal policies, express the earnest hope that the House over which you preside will concur in the suffrage amendment?

"WOODROW WILSON."

GETS ARMED BOY IN THIEF CHASE

East Boston Youth Admits Several Breaks and Involves Companion

Charged with breaking and entering and larceny in the night time of the H. P. Hood & Sons creamery at No. 105 Chelsea street, East Boston, Leo F. McDonald, eighteen years of age, of No. 164 Everett street, East Boston, was held in $2,500 by Judge Barnes in East Boston Court and his case continued to Tuesday, August 31.

McDonald was arrested by Patrolman Monahan, who saw several young men acting suspiciously on his route and ordered them to stop. The boys ran and the patrolman drew his gun and fired a shot. McDonald tripped and was caught.

McDonald admitted breaking into a dozen places in East Boston with other boys. When he was searched a jimmy and revolver were found. He said each boy carried a similar outfit.

An attempt had also been made to break into C. Bennington Cash Market on Bennington street during the night. From the creamery $43 was taken from a cash box.

Inspector Winn made two additional complaints of breaking and entering against McDonald. Other arrests are expected to follow.

ISSUE WARRANT FOR DEAD MAN'S ARREST

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 14.—Legal procedure was necessitated the issuing of a warrant for Conrad Janke, the draft dodger, though the man had been dead two days. He committed suicide in his cell before a warrant charging him with evading the draft could be served.

As he was brought here from New York by Federal officers, it was necessary for the marshal's office to issued a return on the arrest. Janke's body was claimed by friends in Chicago. His body will be shipped there.

Urges "Healthy" Marine

James E. Maguire, candidate for Congress from the tenth district, appealed for a healthy type of marine before the East Boston Neighborhood Club in Meridian Hall, East Boston.

HALF VICTORY FOR SUFFRAGE

Tennessee Senate Votes to Ratify 25 to 4; House Votes Next Week

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 14.—Woman suffrage strode half way to victory in the special session of the Tennessee Legislature when the Senate voted 25 to 4 to ratify the amendment.

Four members were recorded as not voting.

The fate of the nineteenth amendment is now up to the lower house, consisting of ninety-nine members, who will have to act next week. If they vote to ratify, the Federal amendment becomes operative in time to allow an estimated number of 20,000,000 women to participate in the Fall elections. If they vote against ratification, suffrage hopes will have to be turned toward some other State to make the necessary thirty-sixth.

The principal fight on the amendment is expected in the lower house, where suffrage has admittedly a harder more fore than it had in the Senate.

Suffrage Victory in North Carolina

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 14.—The Senate committee on constitutional amendments of the North Carolina Legislature voted 7 to 4 in favor of ratifying the Anthony amendment. The resolution will come up on the floor for its second reading Tuesday.

A ratification resolution was also introduced in the House but not voted on by the committee.

BERRY PICKER MEETS 4½ FOOT BLACKSNAKE

Haverhill, Aug. 14.—While blueberrying on Uptick Hill, Georgetown, near Scraggs Brook, C. W. Harriman, Portland street, came across a large rattle snake measuring four and one-half feet in length. The snake was one of the largest of its kind seen in these parts. Harriman placed a rock on the head of the reptile in anticipation of exhibiting his discovery to his friends. Upon returning to the spot Harriman's catch had freed itself and disappeared.

HAVERHILL REJOICES AT KEEPING $26 RATE

Haverhill, Aug. 14.—Taxpayers in this city were given the most welcome surprise in their lives when the assessors announced that Haverhill tax rate for this year would be $26 on a thousand, the same as last year. The valuation of the city is increased $14,833,705. The increase represents an increase of $12,513,125 in the real estate valuation and $2,320,580 in the personal estate valuation.

IDENTIFY MANCHESTER BODY, FOUND IN CANAL

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 14.—The body of the man found floating in the Amoskeag canal has been identified as that of Leonida Kavamitopoulos, a mill worker, of No. 188 Lake avenue. The identification was made by Peter Deiscoll, who worked with him in the mills. He was a native of Greece, 30 years old and a veteran of the World War, serving with the Greek forces. He was single. His mother survived by a wife and child.

SOLDIER POLICEMAN QUITS AFTER CHARGES

Lancaster, Aug. 14.—Patrolman Harold Fay, ex-service veteran, resigned from the police force here after a special session of the Town Selectmen had been called to investigate the charge that the officer was found asleep while on duty on the desk at the local headquarters of the American Legion.

The police allege that the patrolman and two women companions visited Ayer through Lancaster and swim. Byron jumped from a raft to help the girl after she had fallen in the water.

Mathew McCann arrived in time to rescue the girl.

WORCESTER BROTHERS IN LIQUOR DRAGNET

Worcester, Aug. 14.—Thomas Czarnarack of Ludlow and his brother, Peter Czarnarack of Woonsocket are held under bonds of $500 for the United States District Court in Boston on the charge of violating the Volstead Act. Both men appeared before U. S. Commissioner Frank Irvine and pleaded not guilty. Both men were held up at Leicester line by Federal agents from Boston acting on affidavits sent and blockade of the Springfield-Worcester road.

FIGHT OVER DROPPING AHEARN

Hop, Step and Jump Champion Is Reinstated After Wrangle With Committee

By JACK VEIOCK

Antwerp, Aug. 14.—The present American Olympic committee in charge of athletes who will compete here for Uncle Sam, is as good as through, so far as any future control of athletic events is concerned.

This is the general opinion here today as the result of troubles which have been continually developing since the men sailed from Hoboken.

The latest row has been precipitated by action of the committee in dismissing Dan Ahearn, big, strong hop, step and jump champion, from the team.

Early today members of the committee met with the athletes, who declared they would force a showdown on all their troubles.

Ahearn was reinstated by the committee after he had apologized for his infraction of the rules.

Committee Hands Rebuke to Athletes

Last night the committee undertook to rebuke the athletes for their stands on several questions. Justice Harlan F. Stone, Dr. Edward W. Weeks and Gustavus Kirby, prominent members, addressed the men.

"What would you do if the committee were to quit?" Justice Weeks inquired. Cheers intermingled with jeers was the answer.

Kirby took up the discussion of Ahearn, over which there has been ill feeling, but he failed to rebuke any situations. The athletes remained silent to appeals to "their better spirit."

The stadium was officially opened at 2 o'clock this afternoon with the Belgian royal family present. There was an imposing parade of athletes. Twenty thousand turned out to witness the ceremony, which was carried out in beautiful weather.

America's athletes are generally in good condition and ready for competition at noon.

The second match, on Tuesday August 17, will be the Thousand Islands team against the Miami Valley team, of Dayton, Ohio.

The third match will be played between the winners of today and the winners of the match of Tuesday for the cup.

NATIONAL COMMISSION HEAD NOT CHOSEN YET

New York, Aug. 14.—John A. Heydler, president of the National League, today denied that Judge McDonald, a Chicago jurist, had been chosen as chairman of the National Commission.

A report from Cleveland said Judge McDonald had been agreed upon by Ban Johnson, president of the American League, and that Heydler, after that official announcement of his selection was only a question of time. It is said the latter is a close friend of Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, who has been named several times as a probable arbitrator in baseball disputes.

Mr. Heydler said that he still hoped it would be possible to select one of the candidates last Winter.

POSTPONE HEARING IN GALLIA BASEBALL SUIT

Philadelphia, Aug. 14.—Hearing of the suit brought by the Philadelphia National League baseball club against one of its unsigned players, Bert Gallia, to enjoin him from playing with any other team, was postponed until next Tuesday.

Frank Rogers Donahue and Robert F. Irwin, Jr., who appeared in the absence of Samuel M. Clement, Jr., counsel for the club, explained that these two missing witnesses were subpoenaed to the Gallia case, one being from Chicago and the other from New York. Mr. Moore made mention of their names, but said they had been summoned, but had failed to put in an appearance.

C. B. MORRIS, VETERAN TURFMAN, DYING

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Cleon B. Morris, one of the oldest turfmen of the country, who has perhaps won and lost millions during his career, is dying at the Saratoga Hospital today. Early in the year of a racing stable is dying at the Saratoga Hospital today. Early in the close of the race yesterday afternoon he was run over by a taxicab, suffering internal injuries from which physicians say he cannot survive. Morris lives in Washington, D. C.

STRYKER REFUSES TO JOIN SAN ANTONIO CLUB

Toledo, O., Aug. 14.—Pitcher Stanley Stryker, obtained by the Toledo club from the New York Giants last Spring, and released recently to the San Antonio club of the Texas League, has refused to report there. Stryker here declared that he does not like the Southern climate and will quit baseball rather than go there.

Catcher Denny Murphy, released to Vernon of the Coast League, also is hesitating about reporting.

COMMISSION TO PROBE WHITE SOX SCANDAL

Chicago, Aug. 14.—The grand jury investigation of baseball scandals was ordered today by Judge Charles McDonald, who instructed the jurors to "get to the bottom of baseball gambling."

Judge McDonald's instructions to the jurors were made public by Assistant State's Attorney Hartley Replogle, who said that the jurors would be asked to investigate baseball gambling in connection with the 1919 world's series.

BUFF TO TACKLE WILDE IN ENGLAND

New York, Aug. 14.—Johnny Buff, Jersey City's crack little bantam, has accepted an offer to box Charlie Wilde, champion of England, on September 4. Charles B. Cochran cabled Buff that he would give him $5,000 to meet the little Britisher, and, although no weight was mentioned, the Master jumped at the chance and cabled for transportation.

WHITE SOX SIGN UP MONTREAL PLAYER

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 14.—Ovilla Lebrie, of the Independent Baseball League of Montreal, through the intervention of Joe Page, who for years has acted as Comiskey's agent, signed a contract with the Chicago White Sox. The contract calls for his playing services during the season of 1921. But he might be called upon immediately, after the Independent season closes.

SPORT EDITORIAL

White and Black

Much ado as to whether Jack Dempsey should meet Harry Wills, a colored man.

Next to Dempsey Wills is probably the best heavyweight in the world. Were he a white man, there would be a tremendous clamor for a match between Wills and Dempsey.

Because of Wills' color, sporting writers are debating the "ethics" of such a meeting. They point out that we had one colored champion in Jack Johnson, and Jack wasn't much of an ornament to the game.

However, it is manifestly unfair to hold the actions of a single man against an entire race. Because Johnson was a foolish fellow, it does not follow that Wills would also lose his head if he became champion. George Dixon and Joe Gans were title holders, and were orderly, well-mannered chaps.

John L. Sullivan was credited with originally drawing the "color line" against Peter Jackson, the great Australian. As a matter of fact, Sullivan personally thought he could beat Jackson, and wanted to fight him, but his backers held a different view.

They drew the "color line" to avoid a meeting with Jackson. This is on the authority of Jimmy Wakely, who handled Sullivan's affairs at that time.

Jack Dempsey's handlers believe he can whip Wills with ease, and for that reason they will probably agree to a match with "the Brown Panther of New Orleans" whenever it looks as if there is sufficient demand for the affair to make it draw.

A champion should be champion of them all. Almost anybody can be champion by picking the soft spots. Young Corbett used to exemplify the championship spirit though he never held a bona fide title. He never asked the color, weight or identity of his opponent. He merely asked:

"When do we fight?"

Ray Won National Golf Title by One Stroke

By ROBERT E. HARLOW

Toledo, O., Aug. 14.—Two missed putts, either of them ordinarily easy, sent the open golf championship of the United States to England. Edward Ray, veteran of many a battle, has lifted the cup after having been thwarted by Francis Ouimet in 1913. Leo Diegel, home bred, and Jock Hutchinson, Chicago American, were the hurdles Ray had to take to win, and this time he did it.

Hutchison and Diegel each reached the sixteenth green with 36 strokes. Ray had reached 235. Seven for either of them in the last two holes would have tied and given a chance for extension of the play-off in this contest. Seven meant one under par.

Diegel was first to fall. He missed an eight-foot putt on the seventeenth green, taking a par four. He needed a three for the home green to tie Ray. His mashie shot to the green on his second left that twenty feet from the cup—and he again missed the putt by inches.

Hutchison, taking the utmost pains, made his try coolly, and the ball rested on the rim of the cup.

Harry Vardon, Diegel, Jack Burke and Hutchison tied for second place. Each missed tieing Ray by a single stroke in turning in 296.

Chick Evans, Chicago amateur, followed with 298, tieing with Jim Barnes. Bobby Jones, Atlanta amateur, was 299, tieing with Willie McFarlane. Walter Hagen took 302.

Ray won from the finest field ever participating in an open championship through his general ability as a golfer. He hit all of the shots well, and was cool in the tightest situations.

Ray Steady Through the Four Rounds

While Ray did not produce any such sensational golf as Hutchinson did with his first round of 65, he was absolutely steady. He hung in the low seventies all the way, his four rounds reading 74-73-73-75—295.

Walter Hagen did not make the fight to retain his title that was expected. He started his first round so far behind the leaders that he felt compelled to attempt to sink long putts for birdies in order to catch up. As the ball was not rolling for him, he took three putts on many greens instead of the one putt he desired.

The total scores of Ray, Vardon, Diegel and Hutchison for three complete rounds and for the first nine holes of the last round were:

Vardon, 224.
Ray, 235.
Diegel, 236.
Hutchison, 238.

Para for the last nine holes and the scores of the four principals in the golfing drama give an idea of how it happened. The scores are in the order in which the golfers were playing in the field.

Par—445 344 444—36.
Vardon—438 435 554—42.
Ray—465 345 464—45.
Diegel—445 363 544—40.
Hutchinson—446 346 444—38.

Chick Evans, Jr., led the amateurs with 298, just one shot ahead of Bobby Jones.

The scorey winners:

Ted Ray, England—147 73 75—295.
Leo Diegel, Chicago—149 73 77—299.
Harry Vardon, England—147 75 77—299.
Jock Burke, St. Paul—152 72 72—296.
Jock Hutchinson, Chicago—139 74 73—296.
Chick Evans, Jr., Chicago—150 73 75—298.
J Jim Barnes, St. Louis—140 78 78—296.
Bobby Jones, Atlanta—152 70 77—299.
W. MacFarland, Port Washington—153 74 77—306.
Bob McDonald, Chicago—151 71 78—300.
Walter Hagen, New York—155 74 78—307.
Douglas Edgar, Atlanta—155 74 78—307.

Tie for 34th Place Best Boston "Pros" Offer

Toledo, O., Aug. 14.—George Bowden finished ahead of the three Boston professionals in the open championship. The Boston scores were:

George Bowden, Commonwealth . . . 78—81—313
Leo Teller, Brae Burn . . . . . 77—78—315
John Cowan, Oakley . . . . . 81—80—322

Bowden was tied with five others for thirtieth place. Teller was tied with four others for thirty-sixth place and Cowan was tied with one other for fifty-fourth place.

TERRY MARTIN ON WARPATH

Alex McLean's Protege Proposes to Make it Warm for N. E. Bantamweights

By JACK CONWAY

Terry Martin intends to wage a campaign of destruction in the bantamweight class. Alex McLean, manager of the New England champion, believes this is the best way to procure for his protege a little battle with Pete Herman.

McLean has virtually clinched three matches for Martin. The first will be with Abe Friedman at Woonsocket next Saturday afternoon, the second at the Rink Sharkey at Bridgeport on August 27 and the third with Young Montreal at Providence on the afternoon of Labor Day.

That is a mighty stiff program to map out for any roble ring warrior. Martin, however, is a miniature Battling Nelson and thrives on active ring work.

Kid Block Boosting Three Ring Warriors

Now that the Summer season is nearing its end and all the big millionaires are to close their Summer homes Kid Block is back in the city once more. Block is one of the few sporting celebrities who lives the life of Riley during the hot weather. He would now like the world to know that Kid Lee, George Rice and Teddy Murphy are pining for action in the ring. Rice comes from Brooklyne and, according to Block, will dispose of a flock of bantamweights in this part of the country before he returns to Big Broadway.

Nate Siegal to Try to Kayo Flynn

Nate Siegal considers his twelve-round bout with Paddy Flynn at the Armory A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building next Tuesday night a stepping stone to a match with Young Kloby.

"I'm going to try to stop Flynn," said Siegal at the training camps at Diamond Hill. "If I can get over the big wallop, Kloby will be forced to the end. The Y. D. champion couldn't kayo Flynn. In fact, Everett Paddy gave the Lawrence man a horrid battle. I'm out to do what Kloby found impossible."

Flynn is at North Reading preparing for the frolic. Paddy Owens, who meets Danny Kraumer in a twelve-round match at the same show, is also getting fit at Frankie Callahan's camp.

Mack Murphy Aspires for Ring Honors

Mack Murphy is now under the management of Charley Mealey. The latter predicts a bright future for his new protege. Murphy will get busy in the ring when he meets Harry Martin of Providence in an eight-round tussle at the Armory A. A.'s show next Tuesday night.

Mealey is also caring for the business affairs of Young Gould of Brockton, who is once more in a winning stride.

Jackie Williams Talks Fight Once More

Jackie Williams is able to talk fight again. He is at his home in Cambridge recuperating from an operation for appendicitis. Williams, however, is feeling fine and expects to be able to take an auto trip next week.

Meanwhile Jackie is telling callers how Tommy Robson is going to beat Mike O'Dowd at Lawrence next Saturday afternoon. "Robson's right-hand punch will crush O'Dowd," says Williams. A whole lot of close followers of the ring game believe as Williams does. It will be interesting to see how a wide-open fighter like O'Dowd acts when bumping up against right-hand smashes.

2 MORE GAMES FOR BRAVES

Stallings' Stars Start on Long Road Trip After Sessions With Phils Today

By NICK FLATLEY.

The widely-famed double-header season goes on apace, as they say at Braves Field. There was another today, with the lowly Phils the dual tangle being the last appearance of the Stallings stars in these parts for quite some time.

Perhaps the misfortune that has followed the team all year may desert out on the trails. We hope so anyhow, for a little break in the luck would give the outfit opportunity to hog ahead of several clubs that don't rate as well as our heroes.

It was a tough blow, though, for the Tribe when Charlie Pick's leg was fractured on a slide into third. Charlie is at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital and if the injury is as serious as suspected, there's not a chance of his getting back into the game this year.

Pick Has Been Playing Brilliant Game

The second baseman has been playing brilliant baseball during the home stand, though handicapped by a bad ankle. He has been hitting very well, especially in the pinches, and his work around the bag was as good, at least as that of any second sacker in the league.

Fortunately Young Ford is on hand to fill in and that bird has been showing the home folks a lot of real baseball since the Rabbit ruined his automobile. Young Horace has early nerves, has developed into a mighty fine hitter, and can handle a baseball with the best of them.

John Wilson, who has collected five games in a row, was elected to try to make it six in one of the bouts this afternoon. John has just about set the league by the ears, and is getting into the class where the photographers are on his trail at all times.

Phils Time Hits Well in Second Contest

Oeschger was ready to chuck the other game, and Joseph is about due to show one of his good performances. The latter has been a bit unsteady, nor has he been getting any too much support.

The Phillies couldn't amalgamate their wasts in the initial fray, so they gave the Braves a 7 to 2 lacing. Hughey McQuillan, who tightened up in the pinches. They discovered the system against Pillsinger, and gave him an 8 to 2 licking.

Long John Lisey was the victim of the Braves, and was found for quite a flock of extra base thumps. Jack Smith, however, was the only one else again, and after a bad first inning breezed along easily to victory.

COBERT, NEW SENSATION, TO RIDE AT REVERE

A new sensation in the bike sprinting game has been developed at the Newark track and the local fans will have a chance to give him the once over at Revere Beach Tuesday evening when he meets Willie Keeler in a special match race. Cobert is a new name in Cobert, and while he has not seen the local favorite in action, he comes highly recommended along that line, and he will be ready for another race after he defeats Keeler.

In addition to the sprint match Manager Butler will stage a motor-paced team race with Wilkey and Chapman lined up against Madonna and Lavalade.

BROCKTON OPEN AIR BOXING SHOW STIRS FANS

The Farrington A. A. of Brockton is preparing to handle a capacity crowd at its big open air show at Walkover Field next Saturday afternoon. The feature event will be between Harry Carlson and Jimmy Frusetti. The fact that Carlson and Frusetti are the same boys that these rivals has added interest to the match.

HARTE AND DAVIS ARE WINNERS AT NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., Aug. 14.—R. Norris Williams, 2d, and Richard Harte defeated W. M. Johnston, national champion, and C. J. Griffin, 6—3, 2—6, 7—5, 2—6, 8—6 in the national doubles.

THIS DOCTOR STRONG FOR BASEBALL FANS

New York, Aug. 14.—"If baseball fans are crazy I can only say that this country ought to have more of them," declared Health Commissioner Royal Copeland in commenting today upon the recent statement of Lieut. Charles Hill, Baltimore alienist, that fans are insane.

LAVALADE IS WINNER IN HOUR PACED RACE

Providence, Aug. 14.—Daniel Lavalade of France won the four motor-paced race at the Cyclodrome, beating George Chapman, Clarence Carman and Leon Didier. Lavalade covered forty miles, four laps.

Lever Bros. vs. Texas Company

Lever Brothers team will meet the Texas baseball club at the M Street playgrounds in South Boston tomorrow in the Boston Business League series. As the Texas team has first place and Lever Brothers recently defeated Hawley Folsom, a close and interesting game is expected.

Baseball Title Game

The Parker A. C. will meet the Phantom A. A. tomorrow at the Fenway to fight for the championship of Roxbury. It promises to be a good game, as both teams have been playing fine ball.

Arlington vs. Dorchester

Arlington Council, K. of C., nine meet the Dorchester town team on the Spy Pond Athletic Field, Arlington, today.

SOX WIND UP WITH MACKS

Barrows Anxious to Make Good Showing Before Homecoming of Team

Philadelphia, Aug. 14—The homeward-bound Red Sox were to finish their series here today. An even break with the Athletics was all they secured last time they were here, and the first game of yesterday's double header made them feel they were up against the same curse of air tight twirling that made their last trip a failure.

Naylor in the second game seemed to have just as much stuff as did Perry, who held the Sox to two hits in the opener. But after Schang's long double drove home the first run of this second setto, Naylor was ruined.

Before Connie Mack could get Naylor out of there, the Sox had run their string to seven runs. It was lucky they did, for Moore, the left-hander who finished the contest, baffled the Boston batters completely, allowing only two hits.

Menosky's catch of what would have been a home run featured the first game. Hooper out off a runner at the plate with a perfect throw.

Red Sox Cripples to Be Back Soon

Foster and McNally, the cripples, got back into the lineup during the second game and Manager Barrow said today that they would probably be playing third and second, respectively, when the Sox open up at home.

Bailey's hitting slump continued, although he knocked out a single in the second game. Twice Perry curved a third strike over on him in the first game and he had two strike outs charged to him in the second affair.

Myers made a hit with his new manager by the masterly way in which he tamed the free fighting Mackmen. He looked best in the fifth, when the first two batters to face him hit singles. He fanned the next one, then a fumble by Brady filled the bases. Myers fanned Mosca and made Welch roll an easy grounder to Vitt.

Shift K. of C. Game

Today's game between Boston Council, K. of C., and West End Council, K. of C., will be played at the Randolph street grounds instead of at Boston Common, as the latter place is in such poor shape for baseball.

WILSON SILENT ABOUT COX

Democratic Leaders Puzzled by President's Failure to Comment on League Speech

Washington, Aug. 14—Democratic leaders here are admittedly puzzled over the failure of President Wilson to take cognizance of Governor Cox's speech of acceptance, in which he made the President's pet measure, the League of Nations, the paramount issue in his campaign. A week has passed and not a word from the White House.

Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the President, who went to Dayton as the White House representative after it developed that the nominee intended to adopt the league, has returned home. He just smiled and said nothing when asked about a possible statement from the President.

When he left for the West, it was understood that he was armed with a "statement of congratulations" from the President for release at the psychological time. If such were the case, and the statement has been suppressed, it is a campaign incident which the Democrats are only too glad to keep from an inquisitive public.

Many believe that it was decided that the President's "opening shot" in behalf of the Cox-Roosevelt ticket might be fired most effectively in answer to a Republican onslaught upon the Administration. Such a strategic move has been openly discussed at the Republican G. H. Q., at Senator Harding's home, Marion, Ohio.

5 WOMEN HURT IN AUTO COLLISON IN READING

Five women were injured by flying glass in a head-on collision between two automobiles driven by Mrs. George C. Watts of No. 848 Main street, Wakefield, and Ernest E. Rollins of Reading, near the Stoneham and Reading line. Mrs. Watts received cuts about the face and body and a lacerated right arm. With her were Mrs. C. C. Clough, aged eighty-three, of Elm street, Medford; Mrs. Emma Warner of Chicopee Falls, and Mrs. F. L. Clough of Greenwood, all of whom sustained similar injuries.

In the other car, driven by Mr. Rollins, who escaped uninjured, was Mrs. Rollins, who was thrown from the machine through the windshield. After receiving treatment from Dr. W. J. Brown and Dr. C. R. Henderson of Reading, the injured were removed to their homes.

LODGE MURDER CHARGE AGAINST LAWRENCE MAN

Lawrence, Aug. 14—Joseph St. Sauvier, aged forty-three, of No. 80 Phillips street, will face a charge of murder in the local district court August 18 as the result of death of his wife, Alvina, aged thirty-eight, from nine stab wounds alleged to have been inflicted by him at their home August 1.

The police say that the husband punctured her lung with a pen knife during a quarrel over the alleged attention paid to her by another man. Jealousy is believed to be the cause of the attack. The woman died at the General Hospital. St Sauvier is held in $20,000 bail.

REV. E. T. SULLIVAN TO PREACH AT ST. PAUL'S

"If Christ Came to Boston, Would Some Things Be Different—or Not?" will be the subject of an address in St. Paul's Cathedral next Sunday night by the Rev. Edward T. Sullivan, following the outdoor service on the porch of the cathedral. The services will be led by an orchestra composed of members of the Boston Festival Orchestra, including violins, bass viols and trumpet.

WANT GOVERNMENT TO BUY BONDED LIQUOR

Washington, Aug. 14—Purchase of the entire remaining stock of liquor in bonded warehouses by the government will be proposed by the anti-liquor forces to "put an end to alleged irregular withdrawal of stocks from bond," Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, declared.

FIND "WRECKED" BOAT SAFELY AT ANCHOR

Chatham, Aug. 14—The three-masted schooner H. R. Tower, which was reported ashore on Pollock Rip Shoal, was found safely at anchor in Vineyard Sound when a search was made for the vessel. The captain said that the Tower had not been aground but that he had anchored during a thick fog.

PARTIES TO WAGE HOT FIGHT HERE

Invasion of New England Planned by G. O. P. and Democratic Speakers

New York, Aug. 14—Both major political parties have announced further invasions of New England. The Republican national headquarters has planned a spirited campaign there following the initial invasion by Democratic speakers. Governor Calvin Coolidge, the Republican Vice-Presidential nominee, will be used by the Republicans to offset the visit of Franklin D. Roosevelt, his Democratic rival.

Governor Coolidge will open the "defensive" invasion with an address at Riverside, near Boston, on August 18. He will be accompanied by Governor Edward P. Morrow of Kentucky.

All local chairmen and presidents of Republican clubs in every New England state will be asked to attend this rally.

The Republicans announced that former Governor Frank B. Willis, of Ohio, now seeking election to the senate to fill the seat held by Warren G. Harding, will be sent into Maine within two weeks for a series of speeches.

The Democratic National Committee announced that Homer S. Cummings, former national chairman, would speak at the Democratic state convention in Concord, N. H., late this month. Other speakers of national prominence, it was said, will accompany him.

MICHALOW BALKS AT LEAVING DEATH HOUSE

Ossining, N. Y., Aug. 14—Sam Michalow, who was granted a new trial after being convicted of instigating the murder of Mrs. Elizabeth Lisnick of Yonkers, likes his quarters in the death house so much that he did not want to leave them when a deputy sheriff called to take him back to White Plains, where he will be held pending his new trial.

It was necessary for a keeper to insist on Michalow leaving the death house when the latter balked on taking off his uniform and putting on civilian clothes.

TWO NAVAL PRISONERS BALKED IN FLIGHT

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 14—Two naval prisoners confined here eluded their guards and were at liberty for a short time. The men stole an automobile in the navy yard and started for the main gate, but lost courage when they faced the Marine guard. Baggatt, one of the prisoners, swam to the Kittery shore, only to be taken in custody when he stepped on land. The other man, Harrington, was taken within the prison yard by guards. Both men are long-term prisoners and will face court-martial for the attempt.

NEW YORK HITS COME TO TOWN

The Boston English High School is responsible for Jim Montgomery, the author of "Irene," which comes to Boston next week. He was named after Montgomery street, upon which the High School is located, or else he took that name when he became a Thespian.

He served time at the Alcazar Theatre, in San Francisco, but finally landed on Broadway in "The Fortune Teller." Montgomery found writing plays more to his taste than acting, and in a short time had put over "Nothing But the Truth," "Ready Money" and "Going Up," all three of which were enormously successful.

Montgomery's specialty was writing good comedy parts for male stars, and his friends began to say he couldn't do anything for the girls. He says he wrote the part of Irene chiefly to show them they were wrong. He declares he ran across the original in a bargain basement in New York where she was selling goods, chewing gum and talking to her lady friends simultaneously.

It must be a great relief to Rae Bowdin that she hasn't got to talk to anybody in "My Lady Friends," and that nobody throws her down and drags her around by the hair. In the Frazee farce at the Park Square Miss Bowdin plays a fresh and sophisticated girl. In "Leave It to Jane" a season or so ago, she was a waitress who had to work hard for her salary.

I think a lot of people were surprised to see how well Jack Norworth carried off the leading part in "My Lady Friends." Clifton Crawford was the greatest performer of gentlemanly and affectionate dumbness in the business, and his sudden and dreadful death in London seemed to have automatically shelved this farce because nobody else could play it.

Norworth tackled a tough job. He had never done a straight comedy role, at least in recent years, and he stepped into the shoes of a very clever man. But he not only puts over his lines, but he has created a plausible and logical character, not in the least an imitation of Crawford, and yet equally effective in the role.

"Turn to the Right" is a welcome revisitor. Have you ever noticed how few popular plays ever give return engagements? Well, Hop, of course, came many times. Dave Warfield in the "Music Master" and Maud Adams in "The Little Minister" have come back several times. The ordinary Broadway success comes here with the original troupe, plays five or six weeks and is finally shelved after two or three seasons on the road without ever returning to gather the shekels of those who missed it the first time.

I think the usually astute managers are overlooking a bet. Cohan & Shubert, evidently, think so, too, as witness the new policy at the Ariington. "Turn to the Right" has neglected an opportune time for a return now that Ponzi is out of the limelight. Ponzi is advertising of "Turn to the Right" says, could learn something from the first act of that drama. Remember how they robbed a miser's safe to pay off a mortgage that a widow owed and then picked his pocket and put the money back in his safe.

Grand Opera in the Open.

Not since the hibeyon days of the Boston Opera has there been as much interest in operatic music in this city. You see pretty girls with scores of "Aida" under their arms in all quarters, but usually they are on their way to the Rogers Building, in the old Technology, where Emil Meitenauer is holding rehearsals for the great local chorus.

For the first time the girls and boys of the Handel and Haydn Society, the Choral Union, the Apollo Club and other singing societies are memorizing their music, and will wear costumes and act as well as sing.

The cast is well balanced, and on one occasion when I dropped in the dances here, I do not remember a finer array. Every important singer has sung the same roles with the Metropolitan or Chicago Opera companies, which they will sing at Braves Field.

One of the humorous features of that big performance will be the fact that the home team dugout at Braves Field will be used for the opera stars. Rappold, Van Gordon, Harrold and Whitehill in costume and theatrical finery will be on hand, and if they are not too busily singing after two performances, Dorothy Maynard has come along fast during the past couple of seasons. Her "summer" in the chorus with the Hunt musical stock at the Plymouth, for a while ranked as a joke, and it is easy to see how she has profited by it. Her "Un Bel Di Vine" Maynard sings delightfully and performs with a "verve" that is refreshing. If everybody in the cast had her ginger it would be a huge hit.

As a matter of fact "Kissing Time" has all the ingredients of a really good show "the score is tuneful and all the book needs is some more pep. I liked Edith Griffith in the Barcelona, though her singing voice isn't very strong. She has a smile of extraordinary sweetness and charm, and she is a dainty little thing.

Judels Has the Shivers.

Being in the coast of a snow full of ginger has its drawbacks when the mercury is 95 and the humidity is almost as high. Judels Brahm was on the stage of the Tremont yesterday afternoon an extra matinee in midsummer by the way, and found the snappy dances and choristers running and gasping for breath in the scant support ready to faint.

But the inhuman multitude out front, with a salamander-like indifference to heat themselves, insisted upon the usual encores, and the poor actors staggered out and obliged. Half a dozen performers surrounded me and expressed their views on the head when Judels, the irrepressible comedian appeared with his coat collar turned up and an expression of being congealed upon his refined mug. "My there's a terrible draft around here. I am liable to take cold."

Three chorus girls sweated him, but unfortunately not fatally.

Need Some Bright Paint.

I like the folks up at the Copley Theatre. They are artistic, hard-working and intelligent. Jewett, himself, desires to do good things, and he is more nearly indifferent to the box office than any manager I know. But—there is always a but. In his anxiety to produce novelties he gives us English plays that really are not worth importation. To be sure the New York managers snap up the hits in London, and leave nothing very fine to be secured by mail for Boston, but better repeat old successes than English failures.

"Lazy Lubin," for example, is repeatingly slow in unveiling its story, its dialogue is pokey, and the stage setting would give one the horrors. A little light-colored paint on the scenery would help a lot of plays at the Copley. We know that English lodgings and interiors are frequently dingy and depressing, but in the case of Lubin he was supposed to be living in comfortable quarters rather than a morgue.

Baby Dolls Don't Always Win.

In response to the query as to why the small and petite figure with the babyish smile, laughing eyes and curly hair always succeeds best on the screen, Shirley Mason states that she does not believe it to be the case. Despite the fact that she has all of the above requisites, even to a most desirable position in the films of the silver sheet, she believes that the tall and stately girl has greater opportunity for a role, or reaping an abundant harvest in the field of fame. Few exceptions will be noted and think of all the pictures you have seen recently, you will find that the majority of them were enhanced by some tall and stately beauty, who wears the fashionable gowns and arrange her hair in a most alluring manner. I will grant you that the dimpled type of petite star will remain longer in the mind of the average spectator, but we have to work pretty hard for our place in the limelight just the same. We have to have a versatile talent, plus an irresistible personality that gives us a following of motion picture devotees," is the sentiment of this dainty star.

PARK THEATRE

Continuous Summer policy which has become so popular at the Park Theatre, the feature picture Monday and Tuesday will be a Paramount Artcraft picture, "The Teeth of the Tiger." Wallace Reid, of fast-moving detective yarns, who have been thrilled by the exploits of Arsene Lupin, Raffles and Sherlock Holmes, in crook creation, will be delighted to have another opportunity in seeing the cunning deductions of the famous criminal's latest adventures. The role of Lupin is played by David Powell, who is featured with Marguerite Courtot in the production.

A most unique feature has been made from Cosmopolitan's magazine serial, "Through Love and Hate," and will be the feature Wednesday and Thursday. Lucy Cotton and Wyndham Standing are in the leading roles.

SHUBERT THEATRE

"Kissing Time," the hen hon melodrama, starts its second week in Shubert Theatre tomorrow. William Norris, who replaced Eddie Nelson in the original last season, heads the cast, which includes Edith Taliaferro, Together Mackey, Marie Nash, Primrose Carrll, Frank Hoane, Donald Fawser and Harry Colemon.

"SHIPWRECKED AMONG CANNIBALS"

"Shipwrecked Among Cannibals," the most sensational film that has ever been presented in this city, will be shown for the tremendously successful engagement at Tremont Temple, beginning Monday afternoon next week. In order to accommodate the huge crowds that have visited the Temple while the film of performances management has been obliged to lengthen the time of performances and matinees are given daily, continuously, from 10:30 a. m. until 10:30 p. m., instead of 11 p. m. as heretofore.

KEITH'S THEATRE

One of the biggest bills of the Summer season is coming in Keith's Theatre next week, headed by Barnett and Marie McConnell, sisters, who share headline honors with Clark and Bergman and Jimmy Lucas. The McConnell sisters will make their initial Keith appearance in one of the most artistic musical divertissements ever offered, it is called "Trills and Frills," and has been a hit everywhere it has played. Clark and Bergman, the popular stars of musical comedy and vaudeville, have a new offering, "Tunes of the Hour," and will be assisted by the Cripe sisters in a dancing program.

NORUMBEGA PARK

Norumbega Park, that beautiful cyclonic resort on the Charles, is having the most successful season in its history, and deservedly so, if the public is any judge of merit. The success of this is attributed to the policy inaugurated by Manager Carl Alberts on his return to resume the directorship of Norumbega after three years' absence. The policy comprises a feature photoplay each week and has been further added specialty musical numbers in the theatre are embellished by the Symphonic Concert Orchestra of solo musicians.

GAYETY THEATRE

There is nothing but surprises in the action of Arthur Pearson's "Powder Puff Revue," which will be the attraction at the Gayety Theatre next week. And one surprise is the quality and general comeliness of the "Powder Puff" girls themselves who are now known as the greatest singing and dancing chorus in burlesque.

And one of the principal surprises is the great judgment shown in assembling a perfectly balanced cast of superior players. One may have a cast which is top-heavy, sounds big, but does not deliver a satisfactory performance. The specialty team is made up by Tommy Gray, the music by Carey Morgan and the lyrics from Arthur Swanstrom. The scenery is from the studio of Vitolo-Pearson and the gowns from the customery of the well known modistes.

WILBUR.

"Irene," the smart musical comedy, will be seen at the Wilbur Theatre next week.

The book of "Irene" is by James Montgomery, author of "Nothing But the Truth" and "Going Up." The score is by Harry Tierney; the lyrics by Joseph McCarthy. It is staged by Edward Royce of the Gayety Theatre, London.

The story of "Irene" has to do with a daughter of the tenements who already impresses a young millionaire that he secures for her the job of wearing, for advertising purposes, the fashionable gowns made by a masculine modiste. She is also introduced into bone-headed Long Island society and then the diverting situations begin as she dares to and fro from the tenement to the inner shrines of the social elite, for her old Irish mother objects to her becoming a model and takes a hand in the game herself.

The cast includes Helen Shipman, Sydney Reynolds, Charles Mitchell, Lee Dellaney, Edna Emmerson, Charles R. Littel, Mary Ambrose, Lillian Cameron, Henry Coote and other capable players.

BOSTON THEATRE.

Jane Novak is the star in "The Golden Trail," the feature photoplay at the Boston Theatre the coming week. It is a story of the Far West, full of thrills and is one of the greatest pictures booked at the Boston this season.

"THE LITTLE WHOPPER"

"The Little Whopper," which was one of last season's bigger musical hits and which ran for thirty weeks at the Casino, New York, is to be the opening attraction at the Shubert-Majestic Theatre, beginning Monday evening, August 23. The original company and the original production will be brought to Boston. The cast is headed by Vivienne Segal, who was seen here in the prima donna roles in "The Blue Paradise" and "Apple Blossoms," Harry C. Browne, Will W. Ferguson, George Hassell, Helen Gunther, Nellie Graham-Dent, Esther Lyon, J. Marcelin Dunn, Maxson and Brown and Simone Cochet are among the principals. The chorus is one of Broadway's best.

ARLINGTON THEATRE

Mother Bascom's peach orchard, the little house on the hill, the fleecing of Deacon Tillmeer and other well-remembered characters "Turn to the Right" will give the new season an auspicious opening at the Arlington Theatre Monday night. The Winchell Smith comedy classic has lost none of its original fragrance or charm.

Notable additions to the cast have been Maude Odell, Jr., whose mother has long been a Boston favorite, and Frank Bingham, who was seen here with William Hodge in "The Road to Happiness" and with Fred Stone in "Jack o' Lantern." Others are Jane Ellison, Lucille Poth, Charles W. Goodrich, Maude Huntley, Sidney Henderson, Leo Chalsel, Jr., Joseph Hernard, John O'Connor, Albert Hyde and Joseph Allenton.

GORDON'S OLD SOUTH AND GORDON'S OLYMPIA

Few photoplays of recent years have offered such decided contrasts as "Yes or No?" the latest of best offerings of photodrama distributed by First National, in which Norma Talmadge's life is in the story shifting from one to the other with startling rapidity.

MRS. JIMMIE

"Mrs. Jimmie Thompson," New York's latest farce comedy success which comes to the Arlington Theatre on Labor Day for a four weeks' engagement, is from the pen of the well known collaborators, Norman A. Rose and Edith Ellis, and the play was staged under the direction of the latter.

MODERN AND BEACON THEATRES

The offering at the Modern and Beacon Theatres beginning Monday is an unusually attractive and well-arranged program, the feature of which is Dorothy Dalton in "Guilty of Love," a dramatization of Avery Hopwood's play, "This Woman—This Sex" which tells a story of two temptations. The specialty bill

WHY SEARLES WILLED HIS $50,000,000 TO CLERK

While attorneys for disappointed kinsfolk of the late Edward Francis Searles of Methuen were on the skirmish line today, preliminary to the opening of what is expected to be one of the greatest will contests in the history of Massachusetts, the Boston American came into possession of an answer to the question which has stirred Methuen and Lawrence ever since the will was filed last Tuesday in the parlor of Pine Lodge.

"Who Is Arthur T. Walker?"

Until last Tuesday the name of the newest millionaire was known to only a few residents of either city. Interest in him was aroused by the most important paragraph in the will:

"All the rest, residue and remainder of my property and estate, both real and personal, of whatever kind and wherever situated of which I shall die seized or possessed, including all lapsed legacies and devises and any property over which I may have any power of appointment at the death, I give, devise and bequeath unto my friend, Arthur T. Walker, his heirs and assigns, absolutely and in fee simple absolute forever."

Preceding paragraphs of the will having disposed of approximately $4,000,000, these few words apparently pick from the ranks of New York salaried men and place among the multi-millionaires of the world, a young man whose weekly wage not many years ago was considerably less than fifty dollars.

For Arthur T. Walker was only a short time since a modest clerk in Edward Francis Searles' New York office. Now—provided the courts uphold the will—he commands fifty million dollars!

EMPLOYED IN SEARLES' OFFICES.

Walker may be found any day in the Searles offices in the Empire Building, at No. 71 Broadway.

He is forty-two years old.

He entered the Searles New York office a number of years ago as an assistant to the late William Shillaber, the millionaire's first New York representative.

When Searles was forty-six years old, back in 1887, he married at seventy-one-year-old widow of Mark Hopkins, a Californian of the '49 days, who was associated with Collis P. Huntington, Leland Stanford and the Crockers in the building of the Central Pacific Railroad. He remained the treasurer of that corporation until his death, in 1878.

Mrs. Hopkins-Searles—she lived only four years following her second marriage and died childless—was Mark Hopkins' cousin, Mary Francis Sherwood of Great Barrington. It was while she was establishing a residence for her later days that she met Searles, who, tradition says, was sent up to Great Barrington by the New York upholsterers who employed him to direct the interior decorating of the Hopkins place.

SON OF POOR MILL OPERATIVE.

Searles was the son of a poor mill operative in Methuen. He went into a cotton mill at the age of twelve, broke away to take up music and subsequently went in for painting and decorating. He tried New York. He was merely one of the big city's then two million workers until his certain fateful day, the Widow Hopkins picked the establishment of his employers as the place to order her decorating.

When all is said and done, there is nothing stranger in young Mr. Arthur Walker's "falling into" the Searles millions than there was in the millhand's son tumbling into "old Hopkins' shoes. If one can be understood it is easy to explain the other. Whether it can be comprehended or not the fact can be grasped that a Brooklyn lad, who not long ago was hustling for his subway train every morning, or kicking about the service on the B. R. T., is within speaking distance of three times as many millions as Mr. Ponzi thought he had.

Early in his career as a man of great wealth, Mr. Searles—ever modest and retiring, always shrinking from publicity—enlisted the services of the late William Shillaber. So far as the Hopkins-Searles holdings in and around New York were concerned Shillaber was Searles.

We find the name of Shillaber in the Searles will, but this is a son of THE Shillaber.

"To William Shillaber, Jr., of the City of New York, I give and bequeath all of the stock in trade I shall own at the time of my death in the Newfoundland Packing Company."

Searles is said to have been the owner of a controlling interest in the New York Globe, an ownership which now apparently passes to the modest Mr. Walker. Shillaber, Jr., the beneficiary named above, represented Searles as treasurer of that newspaper.

FOUND JOB IN NEW YORK.

Not many years ago, when the elder Shillaber passed to his reward, the young man in his office continued to do the work. He was an efficient young man. Searles, who disliked making new acquaintances, came to rely upon this young man. As months and years passed there was nobody upon whom he relied so much. One day, Mrs. Mark Hopkins sent down to New York from Great Barrington for a decorator—and one day a young man found lyrical employment in the office of the William Shillaber, New York representative of an unusual old millionaire 'way up in Methuen, Massachusetts.

And this comes pretty near being the story up-to-date of Arthur T. Walker, multi-millionaire in prospect. Both he and Searles bring to mind Sir Joseph Porter, in "Pinafore," who, you remember, polished up the handle of the big front door with such care that eventually he became the ruler of the Queen's Navy-ree.

LIVED NORMAL LIFE.

"Arthur Walker," one of his friends said today, "is exactly the type of young man those who knew Mr. Searles would expect him to be intersested in. Searles, notwithstanding all this rubbish about his having been a recluse and so forth, was first, last and always the gentleman. He didn't go to prize fights, run for office or take a flier in theatricals. No young lady of the chorus ever brought suit against him for alleged breach of promise. Just the same he was not 'peculiar.' He lived the normal life of a normal gentleman. In older countries his sort of life is the usual sort of life of men in his position.

"You will observe that in the Searles will there is mention of a cousin, Edith Littlefield, who gets Park Lodge at Methuen and $100,000 in cash. Miss Littlefield had for more than a dozen years been her cousin's secretary and housekeeper. She and Arthur J. Brown of Methuen, who gets $10,000 under the will, were the financial members of the household next to Mr. Searles. Brown was called 'Superintendent' of Pine Lodge. He always appeared to be a combination butler and general manager.

"With these two, and probably four or five domestics about him, Edward E. Searles lived the sort of life he liked best. He arose about 10 or 11 o'clock in the forenoon and after eating his breakfast attended to his correspondence. Then he would look after the farms. His evenings and nights were spent with his books and music.

"Following the death of the elder Shillaber, Mr. Searles went more and more to New York. At times he favored the Murray Hill Hotel and other times the Hotel Biltmore, but he was always to be found at one of the other. For the last three or four years fully half his time was spent in New York.

"His down town office is close by Wall street. I am not at liberty to discuss his interests in that part of the country but they were extensive.

"Walker, as I have said, is of the Searles type, in that he dresses well but quietly, shuns the limelight, is always the gentleman. He is modesty personified. These qualities were among the things that recommended him to Mr. Searles. Another was that he is a business man.

"A day or two following the reading of the will it was intimated in some newspapers that Methuen was more or less unhappy and critical because the will was lacking in public bequests.

GAVE MUCH WHILE ALIVE.

"The fact is Mr. Searles made his public bequests while he lived. He gave Methuen a grammar school building, the high school building and the land upon which they stand. He erected the little city's Masonic Temple, in honor of his father. He built St. George's Methodist Episcopal Church and also All Saints' Church.

"Over the line in New Hampshire, the town of Salem received its Town Hall from our late friend. Windham got a schoolhouse and a union church. Lawrence's big gift was the Home for the Aged and there was also on the Lawrence list, I believe, a small park. Dowdoin College got a school of science and—with Mark Hopkins and his good lady in mind—the University of California received $2,000,000.

"With the papers filled with what appear to be unsponsored reports that some of the Searles kin are getting ready for a contest it would be in poor taste to discuss Mr. Searles' relationship or lack of relationship with all his blood relatives. That may be for the courts to pass upon. I did see in one newspaper the suggestion that certain employes of Mr. Searles have been saying that he had not been 'himself' for some time prior to his death.

"The will is dated July 24th of the present year and it is a fact that Mr. Searles lived only thirteen days after signing it.

"Among the four witnesses to the will, however, were Dr. Henry F. Dearborn of Methuen, whose privilege it was to know the millionaire in health and illness, and Louis L. Delafield. Mr. Searles' New York attorney. Mr. Delafield is a member of the well-known firm of Hawkins, Delafield & Longfellow, of No. 28 Exchange place."

LEFT $250,000 TO NEPHEW.

Among yesterday's visitors to Lawrence was Harry Curtis, a prominent attorney of Providence. Mr. Curtis interviewed several persons in Lawrence and Methuen in the interest, it is said, of Mrs. Arthur Victor Searles of the Rhode Island city. Of Albert Victor, the Searles will says:

"To my nephew, Albert Victor Searles, son of my brother, Andrew Victor Searles, I give and bequeath the sum of $250,000."

Portsmouth, N. H., reports that a cousin Arthur Victor Searles went to that city from Providence, R. I., early last year for the purpose of getting a divorce, lost his employment in the yards of the Portsmouth Shipbuilding Corporation, got behind with his room rent in a house in Islington street and at times was so near rock bottom that fellow lodgers not only asked him to food, but sometimes gave him kerosene oil to heat his room with. This Albert Victor Searles was supposed to be kin to a man of great wealth.

Because of a provision in the will revoking all legacies to beneficiaries who appeal to the courts to have the will set aside, some legal "sharps" of Methuen and Lawrence believe that if there is a contest it will not be made in the name of the $250,000 Albert Victor, but in the name of somebody else who has less coming to him under the will; or, perhaps, in the name of some Searles kin who is not mentioned at all.

In this connection Mayor William P. White of Lawrence has made public a letter he received a day or two ago from St. Louis, reading as follows:

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 7, 1920.
4151A Delmar Boulevard.
To the Mayor of Lawrence:

Dear Sir—Will you kindly advise me as to whom I shall apply for information concerning the late Edward E. Searles, a cousin of mine, who died at his home in Methuen August 6, as stated in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat of August 7.

Thanking you very kindly for this favor, and enclosing stamp for reply, I am,

Very truly yours,
(Mrs.) SUSAN E. ALLEN.

Mayor White advised Mrs. Allen to communicate with the executors, Arthur T. Walker, principal beneficiary, and Louis L. Delafield, attorney.

BAY STATE FLIER MADE CAPTAIN

Poles Promote Somerville Boy Fighting With Kosciusko Squadron

Edwin F. Noble, son of William Noble of No. 16 Sewall street, Somerville, serving in the Kosciusko squadron of U. S. aviators, has been promoted to the rank of captain, according to a cable dispatch from Warsaw, Poland. Noble was awarded the highest Polish decoration for his heroic conduct in the Kiev campaign, where he was wounded.

Captain Noble is a Somerville High School boy and was graduated from Andover in 1912 and from the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale in 1915. He was an electrical engineer until the United States entered the war, when he entered the United States air service in 1917.

He received training at Columbus, O., and Mineola, L. I., and went to France in November, 1917. While overseas he took another course in aviation at the famous flying school at Issoudun and was commissioned a lieutenant in May, 1918.

During active service after the signing of the armistice, he joined the Kosciusko squadron, composed of American aviators, and enlisted for service with the Poles. He was the first of the American aviators with the Polish army to be wounded at Kiev.

CADDY KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Bolt Stuns His Party of Four Golfers on Mt. Tom Club, Course at Holyoke

Holyoke, Aug. 14.—Wilbur Gryzany, aged fourteen, was instantly killed by a bolt of lightning while caddying for a party of golfers at the Mt. Tom Golf Club course. The four members of the golfing party were stunned. They were Mrs. Samuel Reynolds, Daniel Jenks, Chester H. Ritchie, son, by a former marriage, of Mrs. Elizabeth Towne, editor and publisher of the Nautilus Magazine and a leader of New Thought, and Thurlow Haughton.

The golfers took to the course immediately following a severe electrical storm and before the sky had cleared. They progressed as far as the fifth hole when the lightning struck. The dead boy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Greaney of No. 71 Lincoln street.

About 600 telephones were put out of commission by the storm and several washouts occurred. Five cows were killed by lightning on outlying farms.

Boy Saved by Guard

Charles Turpe, aged thirteen, of No. 63 Green street, Woburn, was rescued from drowning by Raymond Wallace, a lifeguard attached to the station at the Mystic Lake, Winchester.

Watch for This Story in Motion Pictures

"The World and His Wife," soon to be seen in motion pictures at the best theatres, is a Cosmopolitan production released as a Paramount-Artcraft picture from the play by Charles Frederic Nirdlinger, founded on the dramatic verse of Jose Echegaray.

Screen Version Novelized

By Jane McLean

HE gasped, clapping his hands to his wounded side; then, pushing his brother away, leaned against a chair for support, and, so steadying himself, held out his hands and cried to Teodora: "Come here, come here."

Shrinking, awed by the baleful light in his eyes, she moved forward slowly, felt herself embraced in a pulsing grasp and then held off while the jealous eyes stared into her own: "You are mine, mine, tell them that," and Teodora, repeating the cry, sobbed: "I am yours, only yours."

"You lie, you lie——" he thrust her from him, glaring at Ernesto.

"No, no, Julian," I speak the truth."

Ernesto groaned and the gaze of the sick man was to him.

"Betrayer," cried Julian, "you are the real culprit; you are the real traitor."

With feet almost palsied by the sight of such anger, Ernesto nevertheless moved toward his patron.

"Confess," cried Julian, pointing to him with a vindictiveness that would have boded ill for him if he had been in possession of his strength, "that you are guilty, that you have betrayed me."

"No, no, it's a lie, Julian, a lie!"

"Can't you believe?" Teodora added her plea with tears streaming down her cheeks.

"For that lie I'll kill you!" shouted the shaking husband, making a pathetic effort to stand alone.

"Kill me, Julian, if you like, for bringing this sorrow on you, but first forgive me," replied the unhappy young man.

A Confession

To the mind of Julian, warped and eager to find true what he was convinced was true, these words meant a confession.

"To ask my forgiveness means you are guilty."

"No, no, for the pain of your unbelief has caused I ask forgiveness."

The sick man turned to his brother: "The moment my heart breaks, the moment the breath is out of my body, turn them out of my house; set them adrift in the world, disgraced, penniless."

Teodora swayed and Ernesto rushed forward to catch her; at the same moment Mercedes ran into the room followed by the aged Maria. They were in time to see Julian, gasping for breath, drop to the floor, supported by Severo's arms.

Instinctively they realized that dread angel was before them. Julian lay gasping. Teodora, recovering and staring with wide eyes, tried to throw herself beside her husband. The poet held her and with the air of a savior of Mankind; the brow, the dying man cursed her while she hid her face and shuddered before the intensity of his hatred.

Mercedes turned away. A groan came from the lips of Julian; he fell limp, and his brother, laying a cushion under the head, made the sign of the cross.

"He is dead, and there are his murderers;" he cried, pointing dramatically.

Ernesto did not hear him. "He is dead;" he repeated. "He will never know we are innocent."

Teodora raised her eyes to heaven. "Yes, he will know; in the clear light that comes to guide every soul to God he will see the truth!"

The old nurse was weeping; but there were no tears in the eyes of the brother of the dead man; there was no pity in the face of his wife.

Even in the presence of death, they were ready to follow the command of Julian that Ernesto and Teodora be driven from the house.

The sight of the young man going to the widow and placing a brotherly arm about her shoulders roused them to fury.

"You heard what poor Julian ordered," said Severo. "This is no place for either of you! Your presence defiles the house you have brought to ruin! I command you to leave my house!"

"At least have pity on Teodora!" cried Ernesto. "She has no friends —no place to go!"

"Did she have pity on poor Julian!" demanded Mercedes.

The two unhappy beings looked at each other unable to protest where protest was useless; Severo advancing motioned toward the door.

"Your way is there."

"Come, Teodora," said Ernesto, stung into action by this last crowning humiliation, "let us go."

The old nurse made a move forward. Teodora stretched forth her arms. "Maria, Maria, will you come with me?"

The aged woman hesitated, and with a shaking voice asked, "To me, Carissima, are you entirely innocent?"

Turned Away

Teodora turned away while Maria fell on her knees sobbing and watched by the unrelenting eyes of Severo and his wife, the young man and the young widow went forth into the world that so maligned them.

"Where can we go?" asked the woman.

"Where can we go?" echoed the man.

And they wandered on past the Cafe Granada, past the idle faces that leered from the windows wondering what this promenade might mean.

And in the persons of the cafe habitues, the man and his wife commented with unsparing harshness on this brazen sight of the wife of a dying man walking openly with her lover.

Past the cafe, through the city into the open fields toward a little hill on which stood the crucifix where once they viewed the setting sun and when all the world was fair and full of hope and happiness.

To them both the figure on the cross brought calm; here was one who loved his fellow man; one who saw deep into the hearts of men and women; he would know sitting high in His heavenly kingdom that they were innocent.

Weary, they sat down at the foot of the cross to pray, to open their hearts to the savior of Mankind; to find peace in he thought that in His eyes they had no need to ask forgiveness.

Peace came to their wounded spirits and the woman raising clear eyes to the man, said softly: "We are poor, Ernesto, we have lost everything."

"No, Teodora, we are rich, we have found each other," and folding her in his arms, saw in her eyes the affection that was to bind them together in sweet companionship.

"The world and his wife can hurt us no more," said Ernesto, as they started off hand in hand into the unknown.

The End.

"My Sweetheart's the Man in the Moon"

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1920, by International Feature Service, Inc.

. . . and we're goin' to be married quite soon." The girl with a dream sweetheart—and no real one must have hummed it that way—but the girl who has a live one to paddle alongside of, turns the funny old song around the other way and sings in the moonshine, "The Man in the Moon Is My Sweetheart"—for his face is just about everywhere—and most particularly in that lovely orb of silver, that lovely bubble of romance that floats up and up, out of dark trees, into the sky see—to look down into the windows and the hearts of the people who love and are beloved.

The moon spreads magic—and the commonplace, everyday face of the man a girl loves is then fitly held there, for the face that stirs no one else in the world, spreads magic, too, and conjures dreams for the girl who turns up her eyes to his face and the moon's.

"Oh, silver, brooding moon, the man's face in your circle is my lover's mirrored bright on your polished shield, to glimmer and smile down at me, the long ray of your moonbeams that strikes jewels through my window pane is his reaching hand—adoring—saying, 'Love?' . . . and I laugh and say, 'HERE!'"

The Restless Sex

A New Film Drama With Marion Davies

By Robert W. Chambers

BUT once out of their range of vision her hot wrath returned.

"It was abominable," she said in a low, tense voice, "—your going off that way, when I told you the whole evening would be spoiled for me without you! I am hurt and angry, Jim."

But his smouldering wrath also flickered into flame now.

"You had grimmer, didn't you?" he said. "What do you care whether I am with you or not?"

"What do you mean? Yes, of course I had him. What has that to do with you?"

He replied with light insolence: "Nothing. I'm not your husband."

His words fell like a blow; she caught her breath with the hurt of them; then:

"Is that why you have avoided me?" she demanded in a tone of such concentrated passion that the unexpected flare-up startled him. It surprised her, too; for all at once in her heart something contracted agonizingly, and a surge of furious resentment flooded her, almost strangling speech.

"Why are you indifferent? Why are you unkind?" she stammered. "I've just found you again after all these years, haven't I? What do other people matter to us? Why should Oswald interfere between you and me? You and I haven't had each other for years! I—I can't stand it—to have you unkind—indifferent—to have you leave me this way, when I want you—so desperately——"

She Went Away

"I didn't leave you." Jim retorted sullenly. "You went away with—the man you married——"

"Don't speak of him that way," she interrupted hotly. "Nobody speaks of that affair at all!"

"Why not? You did marry him, did you?"

"What of it!" she flamed back. "What has that to do with you and me! Why do you refer to it? It's my personal affair, anyway!"

He turned toward her, exasperated.

"If you think——" he said, "that your behavior with Grimmer means nothing to me, you'd better undeceive yourself! Or I'll do it for you in a way you can't mistake!"

"Undeceive me?" she repeated unsteadily. "How do you mean?"

"By making a fight for you myself," he said, "by doing my best to get you back!"

"I don't know what you mean, Jim," she repeated, her gray eyes intent on his flushed face. "Do you believe you have been insulted by what I did? Is that what you mean?"

He did not answer. They walked on, slowly pacing the deserted corridor. Her head was lowered now; her lips a trifle tremulous.

"I—didn't suppose you'd take—what I did—that way," she said unsteadily. "I—respect and love you. I supposed I was at liberty—to dispose of—myself. I didn't imagine you cared—very much——"

Suddenly he freed his arm from her clasped fingers and passed it around her waist; and she caught her breath and placed her hand tightly over his to hold it there.

Her Heart Is His

"You adorable boy," she whispered, "am I forgiven? And you do care for me, don't you, Jim?"

"Care for you?" he repeated in a low, menacing voice, "I care for nobody else in the world, Steve!"

She laughed happily, yielding confidently to his embrace, responding swiftly and adorably and with a frank unreserve that told a more innocent story than his close caress and boyish heart on fire confirmed.

And, for the moment, she let him have his way, gaily enduring and humorously content with a reconciliation somewhat exaggerated and over-demonstrative on his part.

But presently his lips on her flushed face, on her hair, on her throat, disconcerted her, and her own lips parted in dismayed and laughing protest at an ardor entirely new to her.

He merely kissed her fragrant mouth into silence, looking steadily into her gray eyes now widening with perplexed and troubled inquiry.

"I love you," he said. "I want you back. Now, do you understand, Steve? I love you! I love you!"

Confused, crushed hotly in his embrace, she stared blankly at him for one dizzy instant. Then, in silence, she twisted her supple body backward and aside, and with both nervous hands broke loose the circle of his arms.

A Wild Kiss

They were both rather white now; her breath came and went irregularly, checked in her throat with a little sob at intervals. She leaned back against the wall, one jewelled hand against her breast, looking aside and away from where he stood.

"I told you," he said steadily.

She remained silent, keeping her gaze resolutely averted.

"You understand now, don't you?" he asked.

She nodded.

Then he caught her in his arms again, and she threw back her lovely head, looking at him with frightened eyes, defending her lips with a brave, level gaze across them.

He laughed breathlessly and kissed the partly clenched fingers.

"Don't," she whispered, her gray eyes brilliant with fear.

"Do you understand that I am in love with you, Steve?"

"Let me go, Jim—"

"Do you?"

"Don't kiss me—that way——"

"Do you believe me?"

"I don't want to!——" Suddenly she turned terribly white in his arms, swayed a moment against him. He released her, steadied her; she passed one arm through his, leaning heavily on him.

As a Woman Thinketh

By HELEN ROWLAND

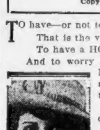
Copyright, 1920, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

TO have—or not to have?

That is the vital question of every woman's life!

To have a HOME—

And to worry about the servant problem and the meals, and the house-cleaning, and the laundry, and the price of food, and the plumbing and the moths, and the rugs and the garden and the screens,



Or to live in a hotel, and perish of ennui and boredom and discomfort?

To have a CAREER, fame, success—

And to dwell forever in the limelight, to be the target of gossip and envy and a mote in the public eye; never to be able to do anything you want to do, or to step out of your "role" for an instant,

Or to be unnoticed and obscure, and to dwell forever in the shadow and the background, watching the parade go by?

To have BEAUTY—

And to spend your life battling with Time, struggling against inexorable Fate—and Fat! dieting, banting, dressing—and dreading the first gray hair,

Or to be plain and homely, and to spend your life longing vainly for flowers and tributes and the light of admiration in men's eyes?

To possess a TALENT, a spark of the divine fire—

And to be goaded to work forever, day after day, by the whip of conscience, driven like a dray horse by the remorseless spur of the creative instinct and the relentless cosmic urge,

Or to be dull and commonplace, and totally uninteresting, and to take life easily and comfortably?

To have RICHES—

And to live awake nights, worrying about your stocks and bonds and diamonds, and motor cars and tire troubles,

Or to be poor, and to lie awake nights worrying about your bills and the price of gasoline?

Above all, to have a HUSBAND—

And to have to stay in town all Summer to be with him, or to go away all Summer and worry about him; to be anxious and unhappy if he is lonely without you, and suspicious and miserable if he isn't; to have to get up mornings when HE gets up, to eat when He is hungry, to play when He is merry, and to be happy our whole life long in HIS way.

Or to be a Spinster, and live in cold comfort and loneliness, with Life as empty as a campaign speech, as dull as a political meeting, and as useless as one glove or a knitting needle without a mate?

Heigh-ho! How can a woman be happy, anyhow?

Because every woman wants EVERYTHING—until she gets it!

And then she wants something else.

And yet men sometimes spend their whole lives

Trying to make a woman HAPPY!

It can't be done!

I'm a woman—and I KNOW!

Millinery for Midsummer

By Rita Stuyvesant

THE hats for midsummer are dainty, with airy fabrics and delicate colorings. Fine, crisp organdy, soft georgette, transparent maline, straw of all kinds and gingham are represented among the newest millinery. There are hats designed for all hours, from the soft sport hat of silk for golf links or tennis court, to the jaunty gingham and demure organdy for afternoons and stunning hats for Summer evenings.

Just now there is a vogue for the tailored and stitched sport hat combining white with rose, green, yellow, blue and other gay colors. These clever hats have soft round crowns with roll brims. White hats are practical, although many women think they soil too readily, but they have the great advantage of wearing equally well with any colored costume.

Demure hats of simple charm are offered in tinted organdy and it is not at all unusual to have a hat to match each frock. An attractive hat is of brown organdy with corn-color trimmings, rather small and faced with corn-color. There is a small tailored bow of the lighter organdy in the back.

Of another organdy is a distinctive hat with large, drooping brim and big crisp bow. A circular piece over the brim, with a fine edge about an inch, forming a delightful little flounce.

Among the daintiest effects are obtained with delicately tinted georgette and flowers or feathers. Of pronounced charm is a hat of sea-shell pink crepe and ostrich feathers. The hat is rather large and the feathers laid flat on the brim, forming a fringe.

No color is more popular than lavender, and stunning combinations are shown with lilacs or orchids. Pleated effects are popular, too, and so are pin-tucks.

ABOUT OUR GOOD FRIEND
Cadwallader

Copyright, 1920, by The Ledger Syndicate

CADWALLADER VARIATION—Cadwalader. RACIAL ORIGIN—Welsh. SOURCE—A given name.

CADWALLADER is a family name to be found frequently in virtually every section of America in which Welshmen have settled. It is, of course, like the overwhelming majority of Celtic family names, derived from a given name; and in this case the family name is virtually the same as the given name, the prefix "ap," meaning "son of," having been dropped under the influence of English speech.

"Cadwallader" as a given name was one which had become surrounded with a halo of glory long before the Normans swept into England and finally brought Wales under their yoke. In the Cymric tongue the name means "battle arranger," or more broadly speaking, "general" or "strategist."

A Welsh prince of this name was canonized in the year 688, being famous not only for his sanctity but attribute which history proves to have been surprisingly common in the ancient Welsh royalty, but for his remarkable success in war against the Saxon Englishmen. Indeed, he appears to have been so uniformly successful against them that the Saxons came to regard him as the very opposite of a saint, and the name "Cardwalla," as they spelled it, became a by-word for trickiness.

The ancient Bretons, who belong to the Cymric branch of the Celtic race, as do the Welsh, knew the name of "Cadwallo."

When Hearts Are Trumps

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XLVI.—Continued.

"IT will be hard to feel that this is my last year at home with you and——" Barbara began thinking aloud. Then she checked herself suddenly.

"Yes, I will talk it over with John—some time," she added. "I must go and get dressed for dinner now."

She had hoped that the burning of Robert's letter would banish from her heart the aching and longing to see the writer. But it did not. The thought of him was more poignant than ever.

It stayed with her while she dressed; it haunted her at the dinner table, at which her betrothed—who was dining with the Paiges—talked pleasantly with her relatives.

A Hard Evening

She wondered how she was to endure this evening, when her friends would be congratulating her—when the men and girls who knew and liked Robert Elliot would talk to her of her engagement to another man.

This kind of thing must go on for weeks to come. Would her courage hold out?

After dinner she stole away by herself to regain the self-control that had been hers until she had received Robert's epistle. She slipped into a cool white dress. She would mail it on her way to the Greenwoods.

She stood at the window in the upper hall trying to quiet the beating of her heart.

"If I keep seeing his face like this all the time I cannot stand it," she mused. "I hear his voice—hear him calling me!" Then as the tears rushed to her eyes she wiped them back and set her teeth grimly.

"I am engaged to John Brandon. I must go through with it. He is so good. He must not suffer because of my suffering. I will not think of Robert. When I am married it may be easier—in another house—with John's friends—to stop remembering.

"Aunt is right. It would be best for me to be married in the Autumn. It will be the safest thing for me."

With a shudder she turned from the window and went downstairs to her betrothed.

CHAPTER XLVII.

"BARBARA, you're very quiet this evening," Brandon remarked anxiously to Cynthia when he and she were alone for a few minutes after dinner. "Isn't she well?"

"Yes—perfectly well. But she is a little thoughtful. She and I had a talk this afternoon about her marriage."

The man caught his breath. "She—Babs—was willing to talk of it? She has made no reference to it to me—and I have hesitated to introduce the subject lest I distress her."

Cynthia smiled compassionately. "You dear man—how little you know girls! Now Barbara is the type of girl who always thinks ahead. She loves you—and, such being the case, it would be quite natural that she should look forward to the time when you and she may have a home together."

"It seems too good to be true!" the man murmured. Then, gazing keenly at his companion: "You are sure Barbara would not object were I to talk about the time for our marriage?"

"I am sure she would rather have you talk of it and decide upon the date, so that she may know just what to plan for."

"The date!" The dreaming expression in the speaker's eyes irritated the woman—but she must not show it.

"Yes," she rejoined, practically. "You must set the time as you deem best. Personally, I should not think that you would care to wait longer than next Autumn. You see, Barbara will be twenty-one in November. Why not be married in November?"

"November!" in a low voice. "Only five months! Elliot would talk to her of her engagement to another man.

"That must be as you decide, of course. I am not presuming to run your affairs for you. Only I do think that it will be well for you to discuss the matter with Barbara. The child is so sensitive that she might be a little hurt if you did not mention the subject. Ah, here she comes!"

If the manager of her niece's affairs had hoped that John Brandon would introduce love and now the topic that was uppermost in his mind, she was disappointed.

Stocks Irregular in All Markets, Trading Dull in New York and Boston; Exchange Steady

PRICE RANGE IS VERY NARROW

Speculation Presents Few Features of Interest at the Week-End Session

By W. H. ROSS.
Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular in New York at the close of a quiet market, but prices were below the opening level. It was a market devoid of interesting features. The price range was unusually narrow, most issue fluctuating within a point. The second hour movement was downward. The 6 per cent. call rate holds over until Monday.

Foreign exchange was steady quotations being: demand sterling, $3.64; franc cables 7.25, checks 7.24; lire cables 4.89, checks 4.88; guilder cables 38.75, checks 38.62; Belgian cables 7.80, checks 7.82.

UP AT THE OPENING.

Prices were higher at the opening and oils were strong, especially Mexican Petroleum and Pan American. Motors showed early strength while steels were irregular and equipments heavy. Rails were indefinite as to trend. The market was quiet after a few minutes and had less breadth than before this week. Most changes were small and fractional at the close. At the end of an hour there had not been much alteration, but prices ruled below the highest. There was no professional element which is now doing the trading is bearish in sentiment, but the market for some time past is in shape that short selling is more hazardous than for some time. This accounts for what strength was shown at the week-end. The money rate has been put down to induce buying, but no disposition to accumulate stocks is manifested by anybody. The situation is uncertain at home and abroad. It may be more so soon. Some brokers are expressing bullish views, but the majority are advising a conservative course for clients. It is generally believed, however, that liquidation of stocks is over for a time at least.

MORE EASE IN MONEY.

The reduction of the call rate to 6 per cent. is a favorable factor, but it would be more significant if there was greater demand for money on speculation. The firmness of the time rate continues, but there is a strong belief of this kind of cash. It is likely to increase after crop moving, unless there is a run of business depression. Bradstreet's says, "Trade is still highly irregular. As to the business outlook it may be said that most institutions are more inclined to collect old loans than to make new ones. The desire to conserve cash is almost universal. Even retrenchment on the part of wage-earners are showing a preference for money in the pocket rather than in the bank. This has had great effect upon luxury business, but staples ought in the present large crops ought to be the basis of a prosperous Fall and big trade. The market for money is very tight now that precedents do not inspire as much faith as formerly.

Copper Trade Hopeful

Copper producers are finding it hard to realize the demand and prices are hoping for increased demand in the Fall. It is reported that large consumers will have to come to them, as their stocks are low. But that will depend chiefly upon business conditions. A buying movement in lead is looked for by the trade within a week or ten days, owing to the big account for the higher quotation. The price of zinc has been advanced this week in response to increased demand.

SAILORS ARE BARRED; UNION BOYCOTTS SHIP

A peculiar situation centers about the former Bath sailing ship Edward Sewall at Buenos Ayres, where a conflict has arisen between the immigration authorities and the ship worker's union.

The ship was in need of repairs on arrival and the demand by the crew that they be discharged was conceded by the captain.

For some reason not explained the immigration officials were unwilling the sailors should enter Argentina and threatened to fine the captain $1,000 if any were released.

The seamen appealed to the union, which declared a boycott on the repair work, with the result that the Sewall is detained.
